U.S. Note Warns Spain Our Ships Will Ignore Rebel Port 'Blockade'

Answer by Hull Asserts 'Effective' Closures Must Be Set Up.

'Freedom of Seas' Doctrine Affirmed

Reply Cites International Law, Holds 'War Zone' Ruling Invalid.

The Crisis Abroad.

The United States, in a note to Spain, proclaimed again its historic stand for freedom of the seas and refused to recognize closing of rebel ports by the Spanish government.

Spanish rebels charged that loyalist forces chained 500 rebel prisoners together and threw them into the sea.

Bombs, in an all-day attack on the Irun-San Sebastian sector, exploded in French territory and forced evacuation of the frontier region.

Rebels claimed important victories, including capture of the region controlling Madrid's main water supply.

France prepared to reorganize its air defense as Premier Blum acted swiftly to meet the threat of the expanded German military forces.

Doctrine Proclaimed.

By Sidney Olson.

The United States last night proclaimed once again its historic doctrine of the freedom of the seas, in warning the Spanish government that our merchant marine will continue to enter rebel-controlled ports until an "effective blockade" is laid down by that government.

The Spanish foreign office in Madrid had sent Eric C. Wendelin, in charge of the American Embassy there, a "note verbale," dated August 20, saying in part:

"Spanish ports in the power of the rebels as well as those of Cuta and Melilla and the ports of our proscription zone in Morocco, Balearic and Canary Islands, have all been declared a war zone and, therefore, it is not possible for the ships of our fleet to permit the entry into them of merchant ships in order in this way to prevent furnishing of provinces of Almeria, Murcia, Alicante and Badajoz and supplies to the rebels."

The note was transmitted to the American Government with the Spanish foreign office's instructions that thus American merchant ships may be warned and that thus "possible incidents may be avoided."

Action's Legality Denied.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull, in an answer dated August 25, said:

"My Government directs me to inform you in reply that, with the friendliest feelings toward the Spanish government it cannot admit the legality of any action on the part of the Spanish government in declaring such ports closed unless that government declares and maintains an effective blockade of such ports.

"In taking this position my government is guided by a long line of precedents in international law with which the Spanish government is doubtless familiar."

The Spanish government had given the warning to other countries, it was stated.

The position of the American Government does not constitute a step toward recognition of the civil war now raging in Spain, State Department officials said.

The problem raised in the exchange of notes hinges on the interpretation of an "effective blockade." According to authorities on international law, the present warning sent by the Spanish government does not even constitute a "paper blockade," a term used to describe a blockade laid down without sufficient boats to enforce it.

Blockade Long Defined.

John Bassett Moore, former Hague Tribunal judge and an authority in the matter, defined an effective blockade in 1907, as follows:

"A blockade to be effective and binding must be maintained by a force sufficient to render ingress to or egress from a port dangerous."

This definition, the most often quoted and most generally used in discussions of the matter, would mean that if an American ship entered freely into the rebel-controlled port of Ceuta, for example, deposited its cargo without hindrance, and then was later seized in the Government port of Valencia for the previous action, the American Government would have ground for protesting the seizure, since the port of Ceuta was not under an effective blockade, despite this present warning by the Spanish Government.

On the other hand, if an American merchantman endeavored to enter the rebel port of Ceuta and was sunk or seized by a Spanish government warship, the matter, while unquestionably constituting an "incident," would not give this Government a clear-cut defense under international law, since the

Premier Blum Calls Military Leaders

Gen. Marie Gustave Gamelin (above), chief of staff of the French army, and other military leaders, were summoned to a conference with Premier Blum yesterday about plans for strengthening France's military defenses, convinced that Nazi Germany is headed toward war.

500 Hurled Into Sea by Reds, Spanish Revolutionists Claim

By the Associated Press.

Rabat, Morocco, Aug. 26.—The rebel radio station at Seville tonight broadcast an allegation that Government forces at Cartagena bound 500 rebel prisoners together in small groups and threw them into the sea.

The broadcast said Communist committees had asked local authorities to surrender to them naval officers imprisoned on board the warship Jaimee Primero after an unsuccessful attempt to join the revolt.

The authorities, the rebel station announced, consulted the Madrid government, which ordered them to turn over all rebel prisoners to the Communists.

The broadcast asserted 500 of such prisoners, including a number of naval officers, then were taken to sea on government ships and thrown overboard chained together.

Bombs Explode in France.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France, Aug. 26.—Bombs fired during a fierce all-day rebel attack on the Irun-San Sebastian sector exploded in French territory and forced evacuation of the region between Hendaye and Behobie tonight.

Several homes of French peasants along the Hendaye-Biriatou highway were struck by bombs dropped from airplanes and by shells fired from cannon.

French mobile guardsmen and gendarmes closed the road along the Spanish-French frontier and advised all peasants to evacuate the area.

M. Dussert, Behobie customs official, was wounded in the leg by an exploding shell.

Tourists fled vantage points along the open highway tonight as shells fell near them across the Bidassoa River.

Planes in the service of both Spanish belligerents circled over

France to Seek Reorganization Of Air Defenses

All Steps to Be Taken to Guarantee Security, Blum Declares.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Aug. 26.—Air Minister Pierre Cot tonight said he would make a tour of inspection throughout the nation preparatory to reorganizing the French air defenses.

His announcement followed a declaration by Premier Leon Blum that the "government has taken and will take all necessary measures to guarantee the security of France."

"It is not forgotten and we will not forget," the premier said, "that every nation which neglects itself, exposes itself and thereby compromises the general peace."

These developments came as French generals sought ways to bolster France's fighting strength against the increased war forces of Nazi Germany, which French statis-

Wallace Favors D. C. Milk Pact; Denies Price Will Be Increased

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace tentatively approved the AAA milk marketing agreement for the District of Columbia yesterday and strongly denied it would boost the price the consumer must pay for milk.

The agreement will become effective as soon as it is signed by half of Washington's milk handlers and two-thirds of producers of milk entering the city.

Written after ten days of heated argument in a hearing at the Department of Agriculture, the agreement would tend to stabilize the milk market.

Wallace said yesterday the agreement would provide "no justification for any increase in prices charged Washington consumers for milk or cream."

"We will do everything in our power to prevent a rise in prices," he added.

The Washington Consumers Council, on the other hand, still maintains the agreement will boost prices the consumer must pay for milk approximately a penny a quart.

Briefly, the agreement would set up a governmentally appointed administration over the supply of milk and the price to be paid by distributors selling milk in the Capital, thus providing Federal control.

Under the agreement, planned to stabilize the market, a uniform price of $3.02 per hundredweight would be paid the producer. The present price is $3.08 per hundredweight, but the department said it would mean no loss to the farmer because arrangements would be made to pay the farmer premiums for quality milk.

An administrator for the area would be appointed and each distributor would be required to file periodic reports with the administrator, showing his receipts, the ways in which the milk was used and the total sale during each delivery period.

D. E. Montgomery, AAA consumers' counsel, said that Wallace should be given power to make full use of the books and records of the milk handlers which would be submitted to the AAA under the agreement.

The Washington market now is supplied by 1,400 producers in Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia. Of this number, 1,100 are members of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers' Association and the other 300 are independent.

Because this association was heartily in favor of the agreement, it is virtually certain the agreement will be signed by the required number of producers.

Drought Ruin Held Widened By Crop Curb

Drought Effects.

The Carnegie Institution, in a report, said yesterday that the crop curtailment program has magnified the disastrous consequences of the drought.

With corn and other food produce being imported in increasing quantities, a foreign trade report showed that American exports exceeded imports for the first seven months of this year.

A report of the Agricultural Department estimated that the food supply, in spite of the drought, will, during the 12 months ending next June, be only 3 per cent below the previous 12 months.

Crop Curtailment.

By the Associated Press.

Contending crop curtailment programs had "magnified the disastrous consequences" of drought, scientists for the Carnegie Institution yesterday said Government guidance of soil use and conservation offers the only solution of a crucial national problem.

In a study made public by the institution, Dr. Frederick E. Clements, of Washington, and Dr. Ralph W. Chaney, of the University of California, surveyed climate and life in the great plains over a period of 60,000,000 years.

After challenging the belief that a great portion of the area is permanently unsuited to farming, they said man can conquer his environment by constructive co-operation.

Cites Present Drought.

Turning to Government activities, the scientists asserted:

"No more dramatic test of the risk attending controlled production through curtailment could be asked than that afforded by the recent drought period throughout the West. Regardless of the question as to the wisdom of such control, its conjunction with a time of extreme drought magnified the disastrous consequences and raised the gravest doubts as to the soundness of such a detached economic procedure."

Stressing the need for co-operative effort along proper soil use and conservation lines, Dr. Clements and Dr. Chaney added:

"However desirable it may seem that this and other social functions make a natural growth, it is evident that the Nation-wide experiment of having the first steps directed by the Soil Conservation Service, Forest Service and division of grazing in their various jurisdictions promises the only adequate solution of this crucial problem in social progress."

Foresight Is Urged.

They said also:

"The dilemma of our country today like that of the world in general, has been the failure to meet change with change and to apply it to the problem of readjustment with scientific foresight rather than political expediency."

Co-ordination of conservation practices is necessary the scientists asserted, with each geographical region organizing to adapt its practices to the conditions prevailing there.

Times of stress provide the necessary pressure and the agencies to guide the response to it, they continued, "and it now seems probable that co-operation will be set forward more in the present generation than in the full century since the settlement of the West began."

Imports Exceed Exports.

By the Associated Press.

Faced with a report yesterday showing imports exceeding exports for the first seven months of the year, Commerce Department officials said they expected the usual fall increase in goods sold abroad to reverse the situation by the end of the year.

Not in 40 years has America bought more goods abroad in a full calendar year than she sold to other nations. Statistics show October, November and December usually are big months for exports.

For the seven months ending with July exports totaled $1,332,471,000, as compared with imports of $1,356,562,000, an import margin of $24,091,000. Both categories of foreign trade showed gains over the same

Heat Wave Breaks; Warmer Forecast As Girl Is Stricken

The heat wave was broken in the District yesterday when, for the first time in the last week, the temperature failed to reach 90.

In spite of the welcome drop in the temperature, a prostration was reported. Elizabeth Beverly, 18, of 2505 Thirteenth street northwest, fell unconscious at Twelfth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. She was taken to Emergency Hospital, treated, and later released.

Although humidity was more oppressive than usual, the mercury's peak, reached at 4:30 p. m., was only 85. The delay was ascribed by the Weather Bureau to cloudiness which prevailed all morning and late into the afternoon.

Forecast for today is probable showers and slightly warmer.

Crowds Hear 'Train Talks' By Roosevelt

Wallace Denies President Has Invited World Peace Parley.

By the United Press.

Aboard Roosevelt Special en Route Bismarck, N. Dak., Aug. 26.—President Roosevelt moved tonight toward the heart of the Nation's dust bowl, anxious to learn at first hand the plight of thousands of fellow Americans in order that a long-range program of drought prevention may be formulated.

His trip, billed as a "nonpolitical" inspection, took on as he proceeded Westward, the aspects of a campaign tour. Crowds flocked to the stations along the route in Ohio and Indiana. Mr. Roosevelt made platform appearances and brief addresses.

To several hundred persons gathered about the rear of his private car at Garrett, Ind., he talked intimately of crops and compared the corn outlook in Indiana with that of the Hudson Valley. With white-haired Gov. Paul V. McNutt at his side he observed, amid laughter, that "the Governor says I don't have to be introduced to an Indiana crowd."

Hudson River Corn Better.

"I am going out as you know," Mr. Roosevelt told his Garrett listeners," farther West and up into the Northwest to see some of the worst drought conditions. I must say this as a Hudson River farmer, that I have been looking at corn today in Indiana and I think our corn on the Hudson River is a little better than yours this year, but only this year because generally you raise better corn than we do."

"I am, of course," he continued, "very much disturbed about those parts of the country that have had practically a total crop failure and that is why I am going out to look at it and get information at first hand."

Gov. McNutt introduced the President to 5,000 cheering persons at Gary, Ind., as "a man who has been, is and will continue to be our friend."

"When we came into the station just now," Mr. Rooseevlt replied, 'Paul McNutt said, 'So this is Indiana.' Then I said, 'It's a lot happier looking Indiana than the last time I was here."

Glad of Prosperity.

"Of course, I'm glad to know things are going so much better and that there is so much more prosperity in Gary and other industrial cities of the Middle West."

In between the operating stops of his Dust Bowl Special the President spent most of his time scanning drought facts and figures and the extent of the Government's relief and rehabilitation program with Harry Hopkins, WPA administrator, and Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture.

With them he also discussed crop reports and the necessity, as well as the method, of caring for those farm families impoverished by the worst drought in the country's history.

Text of Gov. Landon's Speech

Tonight I want to talk about the financial problems of our Federal Government and their effect upon us as individuals. In other words, I'm going to talk about our Government as a spender of part of the money we work so hard to earn. This is a proper approach to the question, in my judgment, because the Government has no money except the money it gets from us.

There are some people who seem to believe that the Government can create money. That is not true. All it can create are promises to pay money. This is what it does when it issues paper money or sells bonds. In principle, this is similar to what we do when we open a charge account at a store. We get something now and promise to pay for it later. If we charge more things than we can pay for, our promises to pay become worthless. The same is true of Government.

So, if we are to be realistic in our thinking about Government finance, we must think of the Government as almost a member of our family—a member to whom day by day, week by week, year by year we must give part of what we receive in our pay envelope or part of the crops we raise. We must remember that every time the Government spends a dollar, that dollar will have to be paid by us or we must pass the debt on to be paid by our children. No parents like to leave their children a heritage of debts and mortgages. But the creation of a staggering public debt closes the door of opportunity to the youth of America, just as certainly as a staggering private debt. We must face the issue squarely. The present Administration's daily mounting deficits are closing the door of opportunity to your children and to my children.

We must not lose sight of the fact that a public debt is just as much a liability to each and every individual as a private debt. The fundamental principles of Government finance are exactly the same common-sense principles that we follow in the handling of our own family finances. So long as our Government follows these principles our people will prosper. They will be able to weather depression, drought and other disasters. But if our Government disregards these principles, it squanders our resources and destroys the public credit.

Now, what are these principles? In broadest terms there are four of them.

Steel Workers' Wage Increase Reported Near Executives Silent as Demand Awaits Return of Carnegie President.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 26.—Reports of an impending wage increase for the Nation's steel workers bobbed up again today in labor circles.

Executives of the big steel companies declined to comment upon them.

A demand for a 25 per cent wage increase, submitted by a group of employe representatives of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, awaited the return of Benjamin Fairless, president, who is on vacation.

The Youngstown (Ohio) Vindicator said a 10 per cent increase perhaps would be given next week or shortly thereafter. Steel executives in Ohio denied it.

The Vindicator, in an article signed by Ernest N. Nemenyi, its industrial editor, said steel prices were likely to rise at the time of the increase.

It added:

"For weeks company statisticians have been working out the effect of such an increase upon the complicated structure of steel prices and wages. Executives have been considering whether the market would stand a price increase, or whether higher prices for steel would lead to lower consumption."

Permanently to regain any substantial part of our lost export trade, he believes it will be necessary greatly to increase our imports of goods and services.

"Lower tariffs could restore this market," Wallace argued in his annual report, "and it is unreasonable and unfair to blame the effects of crop limitation on the crop control machinery rather than on the tariff policy that makes the limitation necessary."

George N. Peek, the President's former adviser on foreign trade, who broke with the Administration over its trade and farm policies, today is at the head of an increasing

Fat Years and Lean

Wallace Displays No Alarm as Farm Imports Mount Steadily.

By Robert C. Albright.

An increasing spill-over of foreign farm products into the United States as result of drought, AAA farm control policies and probably other factors, is causing manifest concern in farm quarters. This adverse trade trend already is figuring prominently in the present political campaign.

A steep climb in farm imports was markedly apparent through 1934 and 1935. It was emphasized further in foreign trade figures made public yesterday by the Commerce Department for the first seven months of 1936. Imports of meat, dairy and vegetable food products, as well as wheat, in July contributed to an aggregate unfavorable trade balance that has continued for every month of this year.

In addition to farm policy, traditional tariff positions of the major political parties are involved in the raging controversy over the trade trend. Already this policy battle has resulted in some important disaffections from the party in power. It promises to resurrect the farm tariff issue as a major theme at the next session of Congress.

The AAA admits that "the adjustment program, by helping to raise American farm prices to a point where the American market attracted imports, were to some extent a factor" in the influx of farm imports in the last two years.

But Administration farm spokesmen lay the major blame at the door of the 1934 and 1936 droughts, technical improvements in European agriculture, retaliatory foreign tariff barriers, and our own past "exclusion" policies.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace sees no reason for "alarm" over the development. On the contrary, he believes that we fail to import goods enough to enable foreigners to buy our agricultural products.

Hopes for Dern Waning; Heart Expert Is Called

European Specialist Flies to D. C. From Boston at President's Behest.

Hope of saving Secretary of War George Henry Dern, gravely ill in Walter Reed Hospital, waned yesterday while staff physicians, consultants from Johns Hopkins Medical School and a noted European specialist fought for the 64-year-old cabinet member's life.

Dr. Fritz Meyer arrived here from Boston early yesterday by plane at the behest of President Roosevelt and was taken to the patient's side. Dern is suffering from heart and kidney trouble growing out of an attack of influenza.

It was learned unofficially that President Roosevelt sent for the eminent cardiologist after the latter's services had been recommended by William C. Bullitt, the new Ambassador to France. At his White House conference this week with the President, Bullitt credited Dr. Meyer with saving the life of Edward A. Filene, Boston merchant, when he suffered a heart attack in Moscow last year.

Despite the critical condition of Secretary Dern, attending physicians issued only one bulletin yesterday, at 10 a. m. At that time he was semi-conscious. His condition was reported unchanged early last night.

Mrs. Dern and their two sons and two daughters who live here seldom left the bedside. Friends said the Secretary's wife has taken a room near her husband's so that she may be near him at all times.

Oliver J. Grimes, executive assistant to the Secretary of War, spent most of yesterday and last night at the hospital. Other visitors were Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff, and John W. Martyn, administrative assistant and chief clerk of the War Department.

Gilbert's Big Bed Draws Laughter, 2 Possible Buyers

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, Aug. 26.—John Gilbert's broad bed, which drew laughter but no bidders at an auction of the late romantic actor's personal effects last night, interested two men today.

Ben Bail, director of the auction, would not disclose the identity of the two who approached him after a crowd of 800 jammed in a storeroom laughed at his suggestion of $250 as an opening bid.

Bail said he was "afraid" the 7½-foot-wide bed, on which Gilbert died last January, would bring much less than $250.

Several days before the auction began, an agent bought the bed linens for Marlene Dietrich, actress, for an unrevealed price.

With half of 1,400 items in the Gilbert lot disposed of in two days, much of the furniture from Gilbert's Beverly Hills mansion remained to be sold, but the smaller pieces were nearly all gone.

Vigorous Speech Cheered by 20,000

Entire Revenue Set-Up Needs Overhauling, Candidate Says.

By Franklyn Waltman.

A Staff Correspondent.

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 26.—In the most militant and aggressive speech he has made during his Presidential campaign, Gov. Alf M. Landon tonight raked fore and aft the New Deal fiscal policies, promising immediate repeal, if he is elected, of the Roosevelt tax on undistributed corporation profits.

He assailed this tax measure, passed last spring after widespread opposition, as "the most cockeyed piece of tax legislation ever imposed in a modern country." He quickly added that "if I am elected I shall recommend the immediate repeal of this vicious method of taxation."

Gov Landon made this announcement after a lengthy discussion of the so-called surplus tax measure in which he contended that instead of "soaking the rich" or curbing large corporations, it actually protected "the big fellow who still has a reserve and ties a millstone around the neck of the little fellow."

The Republican Presidential nominee spoke in the large Offerman Stadium before an audience of approximately 20,000 persons chilled by a cold wind which cut across this baseball park and threatened by rain-laden skies.

Several times during the late afternoon showers sprinkled Buffalo. Awnings were raised several times over the speaker's stand, only to be taken down as the skies cleared. When Gov. Landon appeared to speak at 9:30 p. m., daylight time, the threatened downpour had held off, although a number of men in the audience wore overcoats while others shivered with upturned coat collars.

Cold Cuts Crowd.

The cold snap which descended over Buffalo last night and became uncomfortable tonight, along with the threatened rain, apparently was responsible for several sections of empty seats in the grandstands tonight. The seating capacity of the stadium for tonight's occasion was 25,000, but there were about 5,000 empty seats.

Perhaps due to the cold this audience failed to display much enthusiasm during the first half of the speech, but when Gov. Landon assailed the surplus tax as "cockeyed" he got a fairly good cheer and widespread applause. After that he was frequently applauded, but not with any volume of enthusiasm.

In assailing the tax on undistributed corporation profits Gov. Landon declared the measure made "harder and harder the re-employment" of those now idle and that "it is jeopardizing the job of every man and woman who today is working for a business corporation."

Assails Entire Structure.

Revision of last spring's tax act, he asserted, was but one of the changes needed in the country's tax system. He added that "our whole tax structure, Federal and State, needs overhauling."

In this respect he did not specifically reveal what he had in mind but he devoted a part of his address to pointing out in simple terms how heavily indirect Federal taxes which have increased under the New Deal rested on persons of small incomes and clearly indicated his opposition to sales taxes or his opposition to indirect levies.

He said he always had believed "Government should raise the major portion of its revenues from direct taxes levied on the net in-

11 Townsend Followers Win In California

OARP Will Elect 17 Representatives This Fall, State Chief Says.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Aug. 28.—Elated Townsendite leaders moved tonight to put their campaigning strength behind at least 11 of their indorsers who won nominations in yesterday's Congressional primary.

Although incomplete returns showed the Townsend-indorsed candidates polled a smaller aggregate vote than their combined opponents, E. J. Margett, State manager for the pension group, predicted his forces would elect 17 representatives out of the 20 districts next November.

The aggregate vote, with the ten northern California districts almost complete and the ten southern districts half counted, showed an overall vote of 285,953 for the Townsendites and 349,418 for their opponents.

Hoeppel Defeated.

Representative John H. Hoeppel, Democrat under sentence on charges of conspiring to sell a West Point appointment, was defeated in the Twelfth District despite the fact that he ran far ahead of the Townsend contender, William R. Peeler. H. J. Voorhis, a teacher, won the Democratic nomination.

The Townsendites suffered a major casualty in the defeat of Sheridan Downey, who ran against Representative Frank H. Buck for the Third District Democratic nomination. Downey, attorney for Dr. F. E. Townsend, conceded his defeat early in the counting.

The pension group indorsed eight of the Representatives who apparently survived the primaries. They were Harry L. Englebright, Second District; Richard J. Welch, Fifth; Albert E. Carter, Sixth, and B. W. Gearhart, Ninth, all Republicans, and Democrats J. H. Tolan, Seventh; J. J. McGrath, Eighth; Henry E. Stubbs, Tenth, and Charles Kramer, Thirteenth.

Matre Wins G. O. P.

Among the non-Townsendite Representatives renominated were Clarence F. Lea, Democrat, in the First District, who failed to keep Townsendite Nelson V. Matre from winning the Republican nomination in the First District. Republican Florence P. Kahn, in the Fourth, and Democrats John S. McGroarty in the Eleventh, Charles Kramer in the Thirteenth, Thomas F. Ford, Fourteenth; John M. Costello, Fifteenth; J. F. Dockweiler, Sixteenth; Charles J. Colden, Seventeenth, and Byron N. Scott, Eighteenth, all apparently were renominated. Some were unopposed.

Representative Sam L. Collins won Republican renomination in the Nineteenth, but Townsendite Harry R. Sheppard was ahead of Collins for the Democratic honors.

Townsendite Ed P. Sample was leading in the race for the Twentieth District Republican nomination.

Diver Fights Bends; Hospital Helpless

Eddie went down 187 feet below the surface of Hell Gate yesterday to explore a sunken oil barge. He was pulled to the surface in three minutes. For such a depth he should have been brought up by easy stages over a period of an hour and a half.

Today he was stricken with the "bends," dreaded divers' disease, in which air bubbles get into the bloodstream and cause the victim great agony. Doctors said that if the bubbles reach the heart the reaction might prove fatal.

Authorities at the submarine base at New London, Conn., offered the use of the Navy's decompression chamber there if Barber could be transferred, but Bellevue doctors doubted whether this could be done.

Sen. Davis to Address Moose in Hagerstown

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 26.—Senator James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania, founder and director general of the Loyal Order of Moose, will attend the annual convention of the Maryland and Border State Moose Association to be held here September 5, 6 and 7, it was announced today by the local committee arranging for the convention.

A parade on Labor Day, September 7, will be one of the features of the meeting.

Legion Post Installs Officers at Keyser

Keyser, W. Va., Aug. 26.—Boyce-Houser Post, No. 41, American Legion, tonight installed the following officers for the year:

A. M. Hixenbaugh, commander; H. A. Edwards, first vice commander; M. E. Dye, second vice commander; V. A. Miller, finance officer; P. W. Dayton, adjutant; L. A. Kephart, service officer; C. P. Renick, publicity officer; F. S. Johnson, post historian; A. N. Burgess, chaplain; E. A. See, sergeant at arms; T. C. Giffin, child welfare chairman, and A. G. Springer, Americanism chairman. Trustees are H. O. Rogers, R. A. Gibson, C. S. Briley, Walter Kephart and M. E. Dye, and delegates to the State convention at Huntington, September 6 to 9, R. A. Gibson, C. S. Briley and C. K. Landon Lashes at New Deal Extravagance; Says Little Man Pays in Hidden Taxes.

By Franklyn Waltman

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 26.—Those Democratic newspapers and New Deal spokesmen—along with some Republicans—who have been demanding that Gov. Alf M. Landon face the issues of this campaign, and talk in specific terms, got what they were asking for in abundant measure in his speech tonight discussing New Deal fiscal policies.

WALTMAN.

The New Deal's profligate spending and its happy-go-lucky indifference to sound fiscal principles is the most vulnerable spot in its armor. Nevertheless, so much has been said during the last three years on this subject, it has been discussed and analyzed from so many angles and has been so thoroughly criticized, even by friends of the New Deal, that it appeared difficult to see how Gov. Landon could make an interesting speech on that issue.

But he did tonight. There is nothing original in that address. In one form or another, and in part, everything he said has been said in substance previously. Yet from the viewpoint of clarity, simple and understandable presentation and thoroughness, the Landon Buffalo speech deserves to be called a masterpiece. It undoubtedly will rank as one of the major addresses of the campaign.

There is no doubt that this address will make a favorable impression throughout the country, not only among businessmen who will applaud the Landon promise for immediate repeal, if he is elected, of the New Deal tax on undistributed corporation profits, but also on the average man and woman who will find in it ample evidence demonstrating that they and not the wealthy in the end will have to pay for the New Deal.

Both surprising and thought provoking is Gov. Landon's statement that the cost of the Federal Government annually has become so large that the figure could not be covered if every income in the country in excess of $5,000 were subjected to a tax of 100 percent—as the Communist Party proposes.

This is all the evidence needed to demonstrate that the New Deal bill is being paid by citizens of modest incomes—but they do not know it, because they are paying the bill through indirect or hidden taxes, which Gov. Landon condemned, levied against the food they eat, the clothing they wear and the cigarettes they smoke.

Gov. Landon in that respect put his finger on a vital spot which explains the complacent public acceptance of the reckless and, in many instances, unnecessary spending of the New Deal. If small householders or wage earners each had to pay an income tax of $100 a year they would be quick to protest against the squandering of their money.

Yet, each family pays almost that much yearly through increased prices due to hidden taxes. The drug of the indirect tax is that the average man does not realize he is paying the bill. He is led to believe by "share the wealth" slogans that the rich men are paying it, and thus he displays indifference to what Federal, State and local governments spend, and for what purpose.

Once these hidden taxes are brought out into the open the country as a whole will become more interested in government expenditures and it is a safe prediction that members of Congress will be slower to vote for huge appropriation bills just because some brain truster thinks they should be adopted.

Incidentally, it might be remarked that Gov. Landon's expressed hostility to such hidden taxes, steps on another of William Randolph Hearst's pet hobbies. The campaign is rapidly reaching a point where the only thing on which Gov. Landon and Publisher Hearst will agree is that President Roosevelt should be defeated.

Gov. Landon's Buffalo speech is notable from another angle. It represents his first frontal attack on the New Deal, and to many Republicans in his entourage as well as throughout the country is a welcome change of pace from the more general and moderate-toned speeches he delivered on the occasion of his acceptance of the nomination, at West Middlesex and at Chautauqua.

The Kansas Governor has been under steady pressure to become more aggressive—and more specific—in his campaign speeches, not only from Republicans throughout the country, but also from some members of his advisory staff. It is known that unsuccessful efforts were made in his own circle to have him pep up and put more punch in his Chautauqua speech.

Meanwhile, some Republicans apparently hate the New Deal so violently that they want Gov. Landon to become violent about it every time he speaks. A considerable volume of correspondence has come to him and to the party's Chicago headquarters proposing that he hit harder at the New Deal.

This agitation has had little effect upon Gov. Landon. He planned the West Middlesex, Chautauqua and Buffalo speeches and even before he was nominated—selecting then the topics and formulating in his mind what he proposed to say. He determined that before getting down to specific issues, as he did tonight, he would first disclose his political philosophy, as he did in Topeka, West Middlesex and Chautauqua, as a foundation for subsequent campaign utterances.

Gov. Landon from the beginning fully intended to become more specific in his discussion of issues as the campaign develops. This does not mean that he always will hit the New Deal as hard as he did tonight. But on many issues he will be sharply critical in a constructive way. The Buffalo speech was written before he left Topeka and its form was not influenced by the agitation for a more aggressive tone. The whole incident demonstrates that Gov. Landon can no more be dominated by his advisers and party leaders than by William Randolph Hearst.

Illinois Leaders Assure Farley Party Is United

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 26.—Illinois Democratic leaders today told National Chairman James A. Farley that complete harmony has been restored in the party in Illinois and that all factions are working to carry the State for the Democratic ticket this fall.

Meeting for the first time in eight months, Gov. Henry Horner and Mayor Edward J. Kelly smiled and shook hands before sitting down with Farley and other Illinois leaders to discuss campaign plans.

At Farley's morning press conference, they agreed that their differences had reached a point of considerable heat during the spring gubernatorial campaign, when the Mayor was opposing Horner's renomination, but that this would not affect President Roosevelt and the national ticket. Kelly said he was for the whole ticket.

Gov. Horner said:

"I cannot deny that there was considerable animosity between certain groups in the Illinois primaries, but there never was any controversy on the national ticket. I mean to say that all factions are working unitedly for the Democratic ticket."

Others who attended the conference included Patrick A. Nash, national committeeman for Illinois; Senator William H. Dieterich, State Chairman Bruce Campbell and F. Linden Smith, down-State campaign manager.

Death Gun Traced To Philadelphia

The shotgun believed to have been used in the slaying of Milton W. (Milsie) Henry four years ago was traced yesterday to a Philadelphia sporting goods store, it was announced last night by Inspector B. W. Thompson, chief of detectives.

The identity of the retail purchaser remained a mystery. The weapon was shipped to the Edward K. Tryon Co. in Philadelphia on October 15, 1928. Detective Sergt. Frank O. Brass, who was sent to the Pennsylvania city to trace the gun, reported that no record was kept of the sale.

Intensive efforts to trace ownership of the murder weapon have proved fruitless. There were no fingerprints found after the gun was discovered in a secret compartment of the slayer's automobile several weeks ago.

Henry, local gambler, was slain in April, 1932. Charles Harris, convicted of the crime, is serving a life term.

Smithsonian to Get 112-Pound Marlin

Ocean City, Md., Aug. 26 (AP).—Sportsmen today packed a giant 112-pound white marlin landed off here for shipment to Smithsonian Institution, Washington, because of its rare size.

Clayton Jewell, of Baltimore, caught the 8 foot 6 inch fish approximately 30 miles off shore yesterday. Jewell telephoned the museum of his catch and asked if it desired the fish.

"They said they would be glad to have it, and to send it right on over," he reported.

Capt. Bill Hatch, a local expert on deep-sea fishing, said the catch of a white marlin of this size in this region was a rarity. He explained that fish of this kind caught hereabouts usually ranged in weight from 50 to 75 pounds.

The world record catch of a white marlin, he said, is 152 pounds. One of this size was landed by Mrs. George Stevens, of Miami, off Florida last winter, Capt. Hatch said.

The Political Arena

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 26.—The Democratic National Committee said in a statement tonight Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, will cite secret documents in a radio speech tomorrow night showing William Randolph Hearst "thinks that Landon is in danger of talking himself out of the few votes he might get."

The statement described Hearst as "boss" of Gov. Alf M. Landon and said the publisher "undertook to advise his candidate to shut up."

"Secretary Ickes," the statement said, "has sources of information of his own which without aid of the committee have produced documentary evidence of a most enlightening character."

Columbia, S. C., Aug. 26 (AP).—Senator James F. Byrnes' majority over his two anti-Administration opponents reached record-breaking proportions today, but his claim that the outcome of yesterday's Democratic primary was an indorsement of the New Deal was questioned by his colleague, the veteran Senator Ellison D. Smith.

Returns from 1,348 of 1,474 precincts gave Byrnes, who asked renomination on his record as a supporter of the Roosevelt Administration, 221,304 votes against 21,345 for Charleston's former mayor, Thomas P. Stoney, and 11,210 for Dillon's retired Marine, Col. William C. Harllee.

Late returns showed a second primary, set for September 8, will be necessary to nominate a candidate for Congress from the Fourth District, represented until his recent death by Representative John J. McSwain. In the other districts, incumbents were renominated without difficulty.

* * * *

Jackson, Miss., Aug. 26 (AP).—Senator Pat Harrison, renominated to the Senate by a majority that surprised even himself, prepared today to receive the plaudits of his followers here Thursday night before again turning his attention to national politics.

With only 35 small precincts missing from the State's total of 1,659, Senator Harrison increased his overwhelming lead over former Gov. Sennett Conner in yesterday's Democratic primary to 63,116 votes.

Tabulations from 1,624 precincts give Harrison 127,766, Conner 64,650, and State Senator Frank Harper 2,455.

The six of the State's delegation of seven Representatives who offered for re-election will return to their posts in Washington. With them will go Ross A. Collins, Meridian, Representative from the Fifth District for many years who relinquished his seat to make an unsuccessful race for the Senate two years ago. Representative Albert Dunn did not offer for re-election.

Earl Browder, Communist candidate for President, depicted Gov. Alf M. Landon yesterday as a "figurehead of an incipient Fascist movement in the United States."

"That is why," he said at a luncheon of the National Press Club, "the Communist Party sees as its main task in 1936 the defeat of Landon."

Browder, a Kansan, said he had information that "an organized attempt is being prepared to set aside the will of the people in this election, if it goes contrary to the wishes of certain big business executives. Landon is the candidate of Fascism, supported by Hearst, the DuPonts, Morgan, Mellon and other monopolists."

Baltimore, Aug. 26 (AP).—The Democratic State central committee announced today Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, would open the Democratic campaign on the Western Shore with a speech at Ellicott City on September 17.

Tampico Is Flooded By Tamesi River

Tampico, Mexico, Aug. 26 (AP).—Flood waters of the rising Tamesi River inundated low-lying sections of Tampico today, sending residents scurrying for safety to higher ground. Parts of houses, tree trunks and bodies of cattle were swept along by the river, swollen by last week's torrential rains.

Reports said the flood had carried away the village of San Antonio Rayon and some persons were missing, although no accounts of loss of life in the estimated 10-square-mile flood area were forthcoming.

"I am glad to see that you have had rain," he remarked. Then he asked, "How is everything?"

"Fine since you came in," was the reply.

With him stood his son, Franklin, jr., and his daughter-in-law, Mrs. James Roosevelt.

The first of the series of drought conferences that Mr. Roosevelt will hold in the next several days with Governors of the affected regions, United States Senators and State and Federal officials, will take place at Bismarck tomorrow morning.

Denies Peace Conversations.

By the Associated Press.

Aboard Roosevelt Train En Route to Bismarck, N. Dak., Aug. 26.—Secretary Wallace said after a talk with Presdient Roosevelt today he had been authorized to say the United States Government had initiated no conversations of any sort looking to a world peace and disarmament conference.

Wallace referred to published reports in New York this morning saying the President was tentatively considering proposing a conference of major power rulers, in event he was re-elected, to consider peace steps.

Wallace said the President told him he could not deny a story he had not seen, but on the basis of what the secretary told him of the report there had been no conversation of any sort looking toward such a meeting.

Asked what he meant by "conversations" Wallace said he believed the President meant "feelers thrown out by the State Department."

Hull Denies Information.

By the Associated Press.

Diplomatic quarters buzzed yesterday with speculation over the report that President Roosevelt is considering inviting heads of world powers to confer with him on means to insure world peace, but officials here were silent on the prospects.

The President himself, en route West for an inspection of the drought area, declined any comment on the story about the proposal published by the New York Times. The President sent word to newsmen accompanying him that he could not discuss a story he had not read.

Secretary Hull told newspapermen at a State Department press conference, in answer to inquiries, that he had no information or knowledge of any such proposed peace conference.

The Secretary said the President had not taken the question up with him, and he had not discussed any such idea with White House or other officials. No foreign government, the Secretary added, had made overtures to this Nation concerning a peace conference.

The story published by the New York Times said the President was giving "consideration" to a plan, if re-elected, to ask King Edward VIII of Great Britain; Joseph Stalin, of Soviet Russia; Benito Mussolini, of Italy; Adolph Hitler, of Germany; President Lebrun, of France, and representatives of Japan and China to meet in a round-table discussion on the preservation of world peace.

Any such venture, officials said, would be one of the boldest diplomatic suggestions in history with world-wide implications.

Love Tragedy's Principal Tells Of Death Ride

Lillie Thomas Describes Murder of Escort and Husband's Suicide.

Mrs. Lillie Balderson Thomas told yesterday of the grisly ride into Virginia that ended in the murder of her escort and the suicide of her estranged husband. Then, unstrung and on the verge of hysteria, she secluded herself in the home of her sisters and placed herself under the care of a physician.

Earlier in the day Mrs. Thomas, an attractive woman with light brown hair and blue eyes, kept calm as she spoke of the tragic automobile ride early Tuesday and described the shooting of her escort, Gilmer L. Snyder, by her husband, Clifton D. Thomas.

Part of the way, she related, she rode with Snyder's corpse beside her, her husband telling her to talk to the dead man so he wouldn't die.

She told how her husband shot Snyder and then, his nerve gone and his brain on fire, drove madly about Virginia, while she begged him to ge the wounded man to a hospital. She told how she felt Snyder's pulse falter and stop with his ebbing life and how, bloody and dirty, she returned to Washington on a train—alone.

"It was the most terrible ordeal I've ever experienced," Mrs. Thomas declared. "But if I had to go through it all over again, I still would have left my husband, I hated him that much."

Mrs. Thomas had been separated from her husband since last April. Since, she said, Thomas, who was an attendant at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, had "pestered" her.

Snyder, who was 27 and the foreman of an automobile repair shop, also was estranged from his wife, Mrs. Lucile Snyder, State Department stenographer. He was a licensed airplane pilot.

"I didn't love him, either," Mrs. Thomas said of Snyder. "He was just someone who was awfully nice to me."

Out for a Drive.

She went on to tell of the tragic Tuesday morning. She and Snyder, she said, had been out for a drive and had returned to her apartment in the 1400 block Belmont street about midnight. She was about to get out of the car, she said, when her husband appeared.

"I rolled up the window and locked the door," she said. "He hurried around to the other side of the car and said to Pat (Snyder), 'I want to talk to you, too.'"

The couple in the car agreed to Thomas' request, but he insisted that they drive somewhere. When they refused, Mrs. Thomas said, he drew a gun, "the same one with which he had threatened to kill both himself and me shortly before I left him."

Her Scream Halted.

When the car crossed Highway Bridge, Mrs. Thomas said she became alarmed and screamed. He silenced her with the remark:

"Shut up or I'll let you have it."

"Gilmer appeared calm, but I was nearly scared to death. We both pleaded with him to turn back to town, but he persisted in driving ahead."

Thomas drove through Alexandria over a back street. Then, on the road leading from the old Washington-Richmond highway to Mount Vernon, he stopped, according to Mrs. Thomas, and said:

"Let's all go together."

"We both pleaded with him again. 'You don't know what you're doing,' we told him.

"But without another word he pointed the gun at Gilmer and fired.

"Then he suddenly came to his senses and cried:

"My God, what have I done?"

Both Pleaded With Him.

Mrs. Thomas asked her husband to take Snyder to a hospital. He promised to do so, she said, but continued driving.

"Gilmer was leaning against me all the time," she went on. "I kept feeling his pulse and it stopped beating about 20 minutes after the shooting. I didn't tell Clift, though, because I didn't know what he would do. All the time he kept talking about what a mess he had gotten himself into and how impossible it would be to explain away the shooting.

"When we got to Fredericksburg he apparently lost his nerve. He didn't take Gilmer to the hospital, but kept driving around the town. He drove like mad. Gilmer was already dead, but he kept turning to look at him and telling me to talk to him so he wouldn't die."

Thomas passed through Fredericksburg and tried to prevail upon his wife to take the wheel. She refused and he finally drove on, exclaiming over and over, she said:

"'Why did I do it? Why did I do it?'"

She also quoted him as saying:

"'Now I've made a mess of everybody's life.'"

Threatened to Kill Both.

At one point, Mrs. Thomas related, her husband threatened to stop the car and "finish us both."

"Finally," she went on, "we came to the home of his brother-in-law, Elmer Morris, at King George Courthouse, and I was afraid he meant to do it.

"I jumped out and began shouting to Elmer and his wife, Emma. Elmer came downstairs in a few minutes. Gilmer's body was still in the car, sprawled on the front seat, but Clift had disappeared."

Shortly afterward, her husband's body was found by a neighbor.

"Later," she said, "Elmer got a friend of his to take me to Fredericksburg, where I got on a train. I reached Washington about 7:15 a. m."

When she arrived, Mrs. Thomas went to the home of her sisters—Mrs. Pearl Reed, Mrs. Theresa Kesen and Miss Edith Balderson—at 944 Shepherd street northwest.

Mrs. Thomas said she and her husband lived happily for some time after their marriage but that eventually his "attitude" changed. Once she said, he threatened her with a gun, and eventually she left him.

Mrs. Thomas said she could not "even think of the future."

"But I shan't go home to Newland," she declared, "because there is nobody there but Daddy, and he is so old."

Wirephoto: "Hot Dogs" Cause Dispute

Jose Iturbi, Spanish guest conductor with Great Lakes Symphony Orchestra, appeared unruffled following his release, that came after a dispute in which he took exception to persons eating "hot dogs" while he was leading the concerts.

Hot Dogs Make Iturbi Hotter; 'Am I Jazz Band?' Asks Artist

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Aug. 26.—Jose Iturbi eyed his baton with a somewhat dubious, Spanish eye tonight, and inquired:

"Am I burlesque? Am I jazz band?"

The noted pianist and conductor, who displeased officials of the Great Lake Exposition last night by leaving a yawning radio microphone 7 minutes before his time was up, was a little uncertain about his status as guest conductor of the exposition's symphony orchestra.

"I've asked to be released," he said. "But until I have been formally notified, I have not been officially released."

Iturbi made some pointed remarks last night about "hot dogs, pop, whistles and street cars," all of which were audible or visible at the concert. Today he spoke of more troubles.

"Am I Jazz Band?"

When he finished his program, he said, he was told 7 minutes of radio time remained.

"What do they think I am?" he asked. "I finish my program, it is over. Am I burlesque? Am I jazz band?"

There was a delay as the time arrived for the orchestra to broadcast last night, and Iturbi, leaning toward the musicians, said:

"I've asked to be released, but the trouble is not you. I can't stand these hot dogs, pop, whistles and street cars."

Substitute Pianist Found.

Rudolph Ringwall, regular director, asked Iturbi why he did not start the program and the conductor exclaimed: "Piano." Ringwall said a pianist was not ordinarily used in the open air programs, but a substitute was found in the audience.

Iturbi hastened to explain his critical remarks about "hog dogs."

"I adore them," he said. "I often stop at roadside lunch stands for hot dogs—where I can see them cooking.

"But at my first exposition concert, people eating hot dogs and drinking pop come to stand in front of the platform and stare at me like I am an exhibit.

"They distract me. I conduct only from memory. I cannot give my best when someone chews hot dogs and looks like that."

Jurors Indict Lorton Inmate As Gem Thief

Charged with the theft of a five-carat diamond ring, James Seth O'Donnell, now in Lorton Reformatory on charges of passing counterfeit money, yesterday was indicted by the District Grand Jury for allegedly failing to account to Edgar T. Updyke, Front Royal (Va.) race horse owner, for proceeds obtained from the ring's sale.

The ring, valued at $2,000, was given O'Donnell by Updyke on the representation that O'Donnell had learned of a man who wished to buy it, the indictment charged. Updyke said he gave the ring to O'Donnell in May, 1935, and has never seen him since O'Donnell, it was charged, gave Updyke a receipt stating that he would turn over to him by June 7, 1935, either the ring or the $1,300 which he was supposed to get for it.

Updyke informed the grand jurors he met O'Donnell through Aubrey G. Weaver, of Front Royal, a former member of the Virginia State Senate.

In addition to the O'Donnell indictment, the jurors returned 58 others to Justice James M. Proctor in District Court. The additional indictments, charged nonsupport, grand larceny, bootlegging and other crimes.

Others indicted are Leo G. Simmons, Harry L. Bennett, Andrew R. Morton, Andrew S. McCray, George E. Whiting, Earl A. Middleton, Warren S. Brown, Richard E. Budd, Walter Rhine, Jefferson Lewis, William Calomeris, Bernard Vitale, Tyler P. Burdette, Wilbur B. Johnson, Nelson Henry Caldwell and Joseph F. Mulvey, housebreaking and larceny; Richard Adams, Carl Dixon, William Waites, Joseph Williams, Glennie May Williams and John H. Lowe, grand larceny.

John Gillespie, James Boland, James H. Cathey, Monroe Johnson and Morris Johnson, joy-riding; Johnnie K. Kirkhill, Frank Johnson, Joseph L. Simpson, Edward R. Burkhead, Sonny Marshall, Roy Wilkerson, Georgianna Hamilton, Gladyc Green, John Short, James Short, Charles A. Jenkins, Levi Jenkins, James Mitchell, Stanley Hawkins, William Winston, Jack W. Haarer, George Williams, Amos R. Stepney, Richard Casselle, Henry C. Petty, Algernon R. Tucker and Robert A. Tucker, robbery.

Those against whom the grand jury ignored charges were Hesekiah Bryant and Clarence Taper, violation of the liquor taxing act; Elizabeth K. Simmons, robbery; Walter A. Walker, arson; Melvin T. Salter, violation of the Harrison narcotic act; Elizabeth Dougans, assault with a dangerous weapon; Vernie Lee Robinson, joy-riding; David Taxin, receiving stolen property; Carlton Baughman and Marion Baughman, violation of the motor vehicle theft act, and Vernon Leonard, carnal knowledge.

Poland Frees Women Held Over Currency

U. S. Agents Effect Release of Minneapolis and New York Tourists.

By the Associated Press.

Warsaw, Aug. 26.—All Americans known to have become enmeshed in Poland's stringent rule against exporting currency were freed from jails today.

In absence of word from other American travelers it was not known whether they had encountered difficulties at the frontier.

The arrests and confiscations of money and passports arose, authorities said, over misunderstandings between Polish officials and tourists.

The government has decreed a virtual embargo against currency leaving the country, a step to bolster the zloty and keep capital in Poland.

One of those who became involved carried a bank book which was seized as currency and another had a letter of credit.

United States diplomatic officials interceded and those who were freed conditionally sought to regain their passports and their right to leave the country.

Mrs. Sonia Nordegg, of New York, was recovering at a hotel here from shock after five days in jail. She asserted customs authorities disputed her right to export a nonnegotiable paper.

Mrs. Frederick Atkinson, of Minneapolis, was unconditionally released and charges were dropped.

She was reported to have suffered a breakdown while in prison at Ostrow. She was denied permission to speak to the vice consul until the ministry of justice intervened.

ticians estimated at 2,040,000 men. (Previous German estimates placed their potential fighting forces at 1,182,000).

As the French army chiefs, including Gen. Marie Gustave Gamelin, chief of staff, remained closeted with heads of the government, Paris pressed for an international committee to build a neutrality wall around the Spanish civil war.

Both the Leftist and Rightist French press declared it would be impossible to keep peace in Europe through treaties in the face of Germany's "dangerous attitude," and warned that the best protection for France would be in national preparedness.

As alarm over Hitler's moves was expressed, there were indications that the government of Premier Blum would find increasingly difficult the task of maintaining strict neutrality in Spain.

Jean Zyromski, one of the leaders of Blum's Socialist Party, advised the government to permit the Spanish Socialist government to buy arms and munitions in France.

"A few machine guns are worth more to Spain than many speeches," he said.

His reference apparently was to the many outspoken sympathizers among French officials for the socialist cause in Spain. The cabinet of Premier Blum is preponderantly socialist.

The grave fears already expressed over Germany's increased military machine were deepened by statisticians' estimates of the potential fighting forces the Nazis could put into the field if war should be declared.

Although the German propaganda ministry said the increased forces would number 1,000,000 men, the French estimators said Germany's increased army would swell to 5,369,000 the number of men under arms or ready for war in Europe.

The French concensus on Hitler's moves continued to be that he was moving rapidly toward armed conflict.

To meet this military and civilian leaders said they were working on "rapid, practical decisions."

Official circles, however, said no diplomatic protest against Hitler's increase of the German army was contemplated, as Hitler "clearly has been going his own way since he began violating the Locarno and Versailles treaties."

During the afternoon, Foreign Minister Delbos talked with the Polish ambassador, the Czechoslavakian minister and Yugoslavian and Rumanian charges d'affaires.

Informed sources said the conversations opened an exchange of views between France, Poland and the Little Entente nations on Hitler's increase of Germany's army.

French statisticians based their estimates on regular army units, which they numbered at 1,365,000 men; 400,000 Nazi militiamen and 275,000 youths in labor camps organized along military lines.

French territory. Several air bombs were dropped on the French side of the river. Explosions shook houses in Behobie and Biriatou, but most of the inhabitants and their sight-seeing guests remained in "ringside seats" to watch the battle.

Casualties suffered by both sides were believed to have been heavy in the furious battle.

Tonight government forces still were in control of Irun after hurling back repeated charges throughout the day by men of the rebel Gen. Emilio Mola.

Cannon, manned by government crews, drove back wave after wave of rebel troops charging behind crack units of foreign legionnaires.

Spectators on the French side of the frontier throughout the day saw men mowed down by machine gun fire and witnessed repeated bombings of Irun by rebel warplanes.

From the French side could be seen desperate encounters between the opposing forces, with tanks and armored cars hurled against infantry units.

The side-line observers heard current reports that Gen. Mola intended to attempt to land troops at San Sebastian from rebel warships which have been blasting away at the city intermittently for weeks.

Meanwhile a statement received at Lisbon, Portugal, tonight and ascribed to the rebel junta at Burgos, asserted rebel fliers had destroyed 20 planes flown to Madrid from France and had laid waste the Getafe and Cuatrovientos airports outside Madrid Monday.

The report said hangars, workshops and supply depots were wrecked, and landing fields so pitted by bombs that government planes attempting to land later overturned and burned.

Tonight Gen. Mola appeared finally to have launched a decisive drive to clear out the area in which threats to his rear guard prevent bringing his full force to bear against Madrid.

Government defenders of the strategic sector declared their positions still were strong in and around San Sebastian, where they were said to be preparing an offensive of their own despite the advances of rebel forces from Oyarzun, between Irun and San Sebastian.

Rebel Advance Halted.

Today's rebel assaults on Irun climaxed weeks of air and sea bombardments by rebels, interspersed with occasional land sallies.

During the day of bloody fighting, 2,000 rebel forces drove forward 800 yards along the Bidassoa River, while overhead battle planes loosed 60 bombs on Irun and a shower of leaflets calling upon the defenders to surrender or be destroyed.

Government militiamen, said to number 2,000, blew up road beds under cover of machine gun barrages and brought the rebel advance up short only 3 miles from Irun.

Lisbon, Portugal, Aug. 26.—The most important rebel successes since the start of the Spanish civil war were claimed by insurgent sources today.

In the face of routine government declarations admitting bitter fighting but denying rebel claims of victory, the insurgents asserted:

Rebel columns, fighting for an outlet to the sea in the Irun-San Sebastian area, have encircled the city of Irun, occupied its outskirts and were in a position to complete occupation of the area tomorrow.

Northern troops, under Gen. Emilio Mola, made smashing advances in the Guadarrama Mountains north of Madrid. Mola's troops reportedly captured the Lozoyas region, source of Madrid's main water supply.

Rebel forces captured the Rio Tinto mining area near Huelva. They surrounded 17,000 red Rio Tinto miners, who surrendered without conditions.

Both sides admitted heavy fighting at Oviedo, where rebels and red Asturian miners fought in the streets while loyalist bombing planes droned overhead. Similarly heavy fighting in Estremadura was admitted by both sides. The government insisted it had halted the advance of southern rebels on the capital. The rebels said their advance was continuing.

blockade in that case would not be merely a "paper blockade," but an "effective blockade."

The Spanish government, in creating the war zone, endeavored to close off supplies of arms, munitions, airplanes and gasoline now entering those ports for the replenishment of the supplies of the insurgent Fascists under Gen. Francisco Franco.

This Government is not under suspicion of supplying such materials to the rebels, and the State Department here has applied moral pressure against the shipment of war materials from this country to either faction in the Spanish revolution. This is in line with the American policy of noninterference.

However, there is actually nothing at present to stop the shipment of arms and munitions by firms in this country to Spain, providing the firm applies at the State Department for a license and complies with the provisions of that license, which merely ask an accurate accounting of the amount of the shipments.

The action by Secretary Hull, following his conference at the White House with President Roosevelt the day before, on the date of the American reply, emphasized the seriousness of the Spanish situation and the close attention being paid it in Washington.

Supply of Food For U. S. to Fall 3 Pct. for Year

Agriculture Department Estimates Stocks Over June-to-June Period.

By the Associated Press.

A national food basket almost as full as last year's was predicted by Agriculture Department economists yesterday for the 12 months ending next June.

In a special report made public by the department, they said:

"Although the drought has cut sharply into the Nation's feed crops, the total supply of foods in general for the 12 months ending with June, 1937, is indicated to be only about 3 per cent below that of 1935-36 and 1 per cent less than in 1934-35.

"Since exports of many of these products probably will be less than in the previous year, the supply of food available for domestic consumption will be almost as large as last year."

Surveying the drought's damage to livestock feed supplies in another report, the department said "the drought situation became increasingly serious" during the first half of August.

Water Shortage.

Many farmers were reported to be feeding hay and grain they had planned to save for the winter and there was no water for livestock on 8.8 per cent of the Nation's farms August 15.

This very situation was cited in the food forecast as an indication that meat production in the 12 months ending next June would be slightly higher than last year. The short feed supply will cause heavier marketings of livestock, the economists said.

Increases in pork and lamb probably will more than offset decreases in beef and veal, the report said. An abundance of lower grade meat was reported in prospect, with higher grades decreasing. About 2 per cent more poultry was predicted.

Total supplies of canned vegetables were estimated 12 per cent less than the large 1935-36 supply, but 16 per cent more than that of 1934-35. Fresh vegetable supplies were described as about the same as last year.

Milk Decrease Due.

A 5 per cent reduction in the milk supply was seen, and the production of fresh fruits was indicated to be the smallest in recent years.

This year's late potato crop was estimated at 294,537,000 bushels, compared with 367,678,000 bushels last season. Production of dry edible beans was forecast at about 3,500,000 bags less than the unusually large 1935 crop.

Shortage of certain types of milling wheat would be offset, the survey said, by substitution from ample supplies of other kinds.

During the day 28 counties in Minnesota, Nebraska and Wisconsin were added to official drought territory.

The Weather Bureau reported that showers had been helpful in parts of the northern corn belt, especially in sections east of the Mississippi River, and corn showed some improvement.

Post Receives $40 For Edith Maxwell

The Post yesterday received a contribution of $40.64 from the Los Angeles Elementary Teachers' Club, to be used for the Edith Maxwell Defense Fund.

A decision in the Maxwell case is expected to be handed down by the Superior Court of Appeals of Virginia, which convenes September 8 at Staunton, Charles Henry Smith, Alexandria attorney whom The Post obtained for the Maxwell girl's defense, appealed the 25-year sentence given her by a jury for the slaying of her father, Trigg Maxwell.

The Appeals Court also is expected to decide upon an application for bail for the Maxwell girl, which was received when the court last met at Wytheville.

period in 1935, when exports totaled $1,197,340,000 and imports $1,171,097,000.

"Because of the seasonal character of our foreign trade and the fluctuations in the merchandise balance from month to month," Secretary Roper said in commenting on the fitures, "little significance can be attached to the seven-month balance.

Exports Down.

"The seasonal character of these fluctuations is illustrated by the fact that in the single month, November, 1935, our exports exceeded imports by $100,000,000, with the result that exports for the year 1935 exceeded imports by more than $235,000,000."

For July as compared with June, exports were down 4 per cent, while imports abandoned the usual seasonal trend to rise about 2 per cent. The month's exports totaled $178,324,000 as compared with $184,909,000 for June and $173,230,000 for July, 1935. Imports for the three comparative periods were $193,409,000, $190,387,000 and $176,631,000, respectively.

"It also is of interest in this connection to note the type of imports showing heavy increase," Roper said. "Nearly half of the increases in July were in items representing for the most part luxuries or commodities not produced to any great extent in this country. These included increases in the imports of furs, whisky and other spirits, wood pulp and paper, nickel and tin.

Low Point in 1933.

"The chief point of significance is that the trend of United States foreign trade has been consistently upward since the low point was reached in the first half of 1933, not withstanding some mild fluctuations. The increasing volume applies to the two-way flow or traffic between the United States and foreign countries in keeping with the policy of the reciprocal trade agreement program."

The department said the increase in exports for July this year over July, 1935, was due chiefly to larger shipments of finished and semi-manufactured articles, including machinery; electrical apparatus; aircraft, shipments of which were trebled, iron and steel manufactures, wood and paper, and to larger shipments of inedible vegetable products and edible animal products.

1,000 Midshipmen End European Trip

Annapolis, Aug. 26 (AP).—More than 1,000 midshipmen, back from a 12-week practice cruise to Europe, spent today on the battleships Arkanss and Wyoming, anchored off the Naval Acdemy, impatient to land and go on a month's leave.

The warhsips steamed up Chesapeake Bay during the night nd anchored in Annapolis Roads at 6:40 a. m. Throughout the day midshipmen working parties in motor boats brought laundry, baggage and equipment ashore. Officers attached to the Academy who made the cruise disembarked.

The midshipmen will begin landing tomorrow after daybreak. They will report to Bancroft Hall and then leave on a holiday until September 25, when the new scholastic year begins.

Elk Hunt Causes Rush.

Boise, Idaho, Aug. 26 (AP).—Six hundred and forty-eight Idahoans—40 of them women—are candidates to hunt 200 elk. With more than three applicants for each of the $5 special licenses for hunting on the Pocatello game preserve, the State Game Department decided today to select the 200 hunters by lot. The special hunt, between October 5 and 15, was ordered to end over-population of the preserve.

SEC Restricts Market Activity Of Its Employes

By the Associated Press.

Instant dismissal was threatened by the Securities Commission yesterday for any of its 1,100 employes who carry out a transaction in a security under its jurisdiction except on a strictly bona fide investment basis.

Stringent rules intended to prevent the employes from taking financial advantage of information held by the commission were circulated among the personnel.

They said that margin accounts would not be tolerated; that each employe must report every security transaction—whether exempt from prohibition or otherwise—within 48 hours; that transactions of wives or husbands of employes must be reported similarly; and that cash purchases for other than bona fide investment purposes are prohibited.

Short sales would be presumed to be speculative, the commission ruled, and therefore barred.

The order will permit employes to acquire securities of "investment grade issued by established businesses" only after the lapse of 30 days from the effective date of the statement registering them with the commission.

The commission said it will regard as not for investment purposes any purchase of any security which the buyer fails to hold for one year, and that all purchases of securities of companies in receivership or in process of reorganization are barred.

Also forbidden was the acquisition of any security of any utility or holding company subject to the jurisdiction of the commission.

Gov. Nice Joins Efforts to End Rubber Strike

Halts Vacation Cruise to Assist Mediators at Cumberland.

By the Associated Press.

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 26.—Gov. Harry W. Nice decided late today to join in efforts of State and Federal Labor conciliators to settle the strike at the Kelly-Springfield Tire Co. plant here.

Interrupting a vacation cruise on the Chesapeake Bay, Gov. Nice left his yacht at Solomons, Md., and set out by automobile for the strike scene. He telegraphed State Senator Robert B. Kimble he would arrive during the night and meet the union men at 10 a. m., tomorrow.

Kimble spoke to the strikers today, calling tear gas barrages loosed yesterday and last night upon the strikers a "dastardly attack" by the Cumberland police. He said the release of the gas would "go down as the blackest page in the history of this community."

There was no disorder today. The plant was closed for an indefinite period, hard on the heels of three gas bomb barrages fired last night by the police into pickets, and strike sympathizers thronged about the factory gates. The gas was loosed as shifts of workers changed.

Edmund S. Burke, president of the rubber company, issued the closing order. He said he did so because "employes who wanted to work could not get proper protection."

Gov. Nice telephoned his office that all forces of the State would be mobilized to protect persons and property, but that they would not "interfere in the private dispute between the employer and the employe."

The Governor denied State policemen tossed the gas bombs. That was done, he said, by the Cumberland City police.

Police Commissioner Harry Irvin declined to comment on Nice's denial. Chief of Police Oscar A. Eyerman also declined to comment. The State law setting up the police department specifies that its officers shall not act within a municipality except on specific request.

The Governor did not refer to a protest filed by the Allegany Trades Council against use of the State police.

The council "condemned" use of the State police to "intimidate strikers engaged in peaceful and lawful picketing." Its telegram to Nice asked that he "curb their (the State police) unwarranted activities."

Maj. Enoch B. Garey, superintendent of State police, arrived early today. He declined comment other than to say there had been no disorder since his arrival.

The Governor, after telephonic conferences with State and Allegany County officials from Solomons in Southern Maryland, instructed Henry Tay Duer, State commissioner of labor and statistics, to proceed here.

The strike was begun Monday under the sponsorship of Local No. 26, United Rubber Workers of America, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor. John Geis, president of the local, estimated then that 600 would strike.

Texas Steamer Ablaze.

Hamburg, Germany, Aug. 26 (AP). Fire started tonight aboard the jute-laden steamer Westmoreland, owned by Lykes Brothers, of Galveston, Tex., but the men battling the blaze said they hoped to subdue it early tomorrow. The fire occurred as the vessel, of 8,207 tons, lay in port.

Press Comment Praises Speech Of Gov. Landon

N. Y. Times Finds Address Most Effective Yet Made by Nominee.

By the United Press.

Some editorial comment on Gov. Alf M. Landon's Buffalo speech of last night:

New York Times (Independent-Democrat)—Gov. Landon's address at Buffalo is probably the most effective he has made thus far in the campaign. His comments on the Federal Government's financial problem . . . showed a sound grasp of the problem, and they attacked the Roosevelt Administration at admittedly its weakest point . . . When he turns to the subject of expenditures, it is true, he remains vague regarding just where he would apply the knife . . . What he does promise is adherence to principles that might rapidly make a balanced budget possible.

New York Herald-Tribune (Independent-Republican)—The querulous cry will no doubt be raised by New Dealers, "Just what items does Gov. Landon plan to reduce, and how does he mean to effect his savings?" The answer to this is, of course, that it is principles and not items that are at issue in the present case. Mr. Landon says that he means, if elected, to establish "a system of simple, honest bookkeeping." This should be enough for believers in sound finance. It means that if he is put at the head of the Government we shall see an end, once and for all, of the vicious and wasteful financial system which has flourished these last three years, and which can best be described as the Federal equivalent of the practice of certain corporations of "keeping two sets of books."

Chicago Tribune (Independent-Republican)—Gov. Landon's speech on taxation should go far to win the election for him. He told the American people in terms which anyone can understand the principles which should guide our Government • • • in collecting and spending its revenue. The speech presents his opponents with a dilemma—they dare not ignore the Buffalo address and they cannot refute it."

Landon to Keep His Hands Off In N. Y. Fight

By a Staff Correspondent.

Buffalo, Aug. 26.—Despite repeated efforts to get him to intervene, Gov. Alf M. Landon today persisted in a hands-off policy in the highly delicate controversy among New York Republicans over a gubernatorial candidate

In an effort to work out some solution of the controversy, which may have a vital effect on the outcome of the Presidential contest, a hurry call was sent to Republican National Chairman John Hamilton to come here 12 hours earlier than he had planned. Hamilton responded but refused to be an arbiter at this stage of the situation, although he canvassed the views of the various factions.

The Landon high command tonight had become somewhat nervous over the intra-State situation here and over efforts to draw Gov. Landon into the fight over the gubernatorial nomination. The fight has narrowed to one between Justice William F. Bleakley, of Westchester County, and Republican State Senate leader George R. Fearon.

The Landon advisers were fearful that if the Kansan or the national leadership was drawn into the factional fight, his chances in New York would be placed in jeopardy as happened to Charles Evans Hughes in California in 1916 when he allegedly snubbed the Hiram Johnson wing of the Republican Party in that State.

For the first time in many years a Republican Presidential candidate came into New York without conferring with Old Guard Republican National Committeeman Charles D. Hilles. The latter was in Buffalo throughout the day but he was not invited to visit Gov. Landon nor did the latter see him except distantly at a luncheon.

Hilles was part of a last resort Old Guard effort at Cleveland to block Gov. Landon's nomination for the Presidency although he swung over to the Kansan when he saw the battle was lost.

Not only were all of the State's Republican county leaders assembled here today—and remained for the Landon speech tonight—including such nationally known figures as former Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills; Republican Leader of the House Bertrand H. Snell and Hilles, but a large number of other Republican leaders and other notables were in Buffalo.

In addition to Hamilton and his immediate advisory staff there were Representatives Chester C. Bolton, chairman of the Republican Congressional campaign committee; Eastern Campaign Manager Joseph Martin, John Q. Tilson, an aspirant for the Republican gubernatorial nomination in Connecticut; National Committeeman Edward P. Colladay, of the District of Columbia, and Senator John G. Townsend, of Delaware.

Gov. Landon spent most of the day at the home of Edward H. Butler, publisher of the Buffalo Evening News, where he received his visitors. He was the guest at luncheon, however, of William J. Conners, publisher of the Buffalo Courier-Express, at the latter office along with a list of Republican leaders and Buffalo notables.

lows in the handling of his own finances. They are the same four great principles which a prudent, foresighted government must follow if it is to meet the financial demands made upon it by an increasingly complex civilization.

Now let us examine each of the four principles in turn:

The first is the question of guarding and preserving the source of income. Fundamentally this is a question of the fairness of the kind of taxes that are levied. Are they direct taxes levied according to our ability to pay, or are they indirect taxes levied without regard to our ability to contribute to the support of the Government?

Revenue Beliefs.

It has always been my belief that the Government should raise the major portion of its revenue from direct taxes levied on the net incomes of individuals and corporations. When this is done everyone pays for his fair share and knows just how much the Government is costing him. I have constantly worked for legislation in Kansas to prevent concealment of the cost of government. On the other hand, if the major portion of the Government's income is obtained from indirect and hidden taxes—taxes upon such things as food, clothing, gasoline and cigarettes—then the main burden falls upon those of small income and the cost of government is hidden. In this case, it is the wage earner, the salaried worker, the farmer and the small businessman who have to pay most of the bill. Now, let us turn to the record and see just who is paying the cost of our Government.

What do the figures of the Treasury Department show? They show that in the year 1932, 59 cents out of every dollar collected by our Federal Government was secured from direct taxes. The other 41 cents was collected from indirect and hidden taxes, paid, for the most part, by people with incomes of $25 a week or less.

That was for 1932. Four years later what do we find? We find that 51 cents out of every dollar collected by the Federal Government came from hidden taxes. In other words, the share of the cost of government falling mainly on those with incomes of $25 a week or less has increased 25 per cent during the three years of the present Administration. They are paying far more than their rightful share of the cost of government. Any housewife can tell you this, because the housewife knows better than anybody else, how the mounting cost of living is curtailing the comforts of the home. And you cannot long fool her with the pretense that only the rich will pay.

This increase has come despite the fact that the tax rates on incomes of individuals and corporations have been raised. It has come despite the fact that they are paying far more actual money into the Treasury than they did in 1932. In other words, the larger payments by well-to-do individuals and corporations have not been enough to cover the waste and extravagance of this Administration. What is the result? Those of our citizens with small incomes have had to pay an increased proportion of the cost of the Federal Government.

Two-Cent Bread Tax.

And just how have those with small incomes paid more? When we consider the government as a whole—Federal, State and local—we find that they have paid in a thousand different ways. Take bread for example. When we buy a loaf of bread for 10 cents we pay about 8 cents for the bread. The other 2 cents goes for taxes. If we smoke a package of cigarettes a day we pay $22 a year in taxes. So it is in all our spending. We cannot buy a suit of clothing without the Government's taking in taxes a part of the money we pay out. We cannot buy an ounce of food at our grocery store without being taxed to support the Government. We cannot go to a movie, or to a baseball game, or ride in an automobile with this invisible tax arm of government reaching out and taking a part of the money we spend. This has been a growing tendency of government in recent years.

Most of these taxes, it is true, are hidden so deeply that we cannot see them. But the taxes are there just as truly as they are in the sales tax on gasoline. They cost just as much, and are just as real, as they would be if they were taken right out of our pay envelopes. These hidden taxes—Federal State and local—amount to about 20 cents of every dollar we spend. In the case of the Federal Government alone they amount to over $5 a month for every family.

It is in this way that the Government's financial policies affect us as individuals. The more the Government wastes, the more money it has to take from us. The more it takes from us the less food and clothing we can buy for ourselves, the less we have for the education of our children and the less we have left to set aside for meeting emergencies—for the building of homes, for improvement of farms, for the construction of factories. In short, every dollar that the Government takes from us in taxes means just $1 less for us—a dollar that we might use to buy things, the production of which would create jobs.

Surplus Tax Bill.

There is no better illustration of all this than the so-called surplus tax bill jammed through Congress this spring.

One practical effect of this tax law is to prevent a corporation from using its earnings in the business. It must pay them out in dividends. In consequence, earnings no longer provide funds for making needed improvements, for replacing out-of-date equipment, and for additions to the plant.

Now what does this mean to a man looking for a job? It means less chance of finding work. There will not be those jobs that come from the gradual growth of our small businesses, from the replacement of equipment, and from plant expansion.

For those workers who already have jobs the effect of tax law is just as bad. Because of this legislation it is no longer possible for a business, except at unbearable cost, to build up a reserve for meeting future losses. In other words, a business organization, unless it already has reserves, is put on a hand-to-mouth basis. This means that it can exist only so long as it can make a profit. Once trade slackens to the point where the business cannot make a profit, it is lost. Not having a reserve to fall back upon, its lot is bankruptcy, and the lot of the workers is unemployment.

There is one other point in this connection I would like to mention: During the depression, private industry paid out over 20 billion dollars more than it took in—20 billion dollars that helped to cushion the depression and keep employes working. This expenditure was possible only because of reserves created during prosperous years.

Yet by careless, ill-advised tax legislation this present Administration is, in effect, forbidding a restoration of the reserves exhausted by the depression. The sponsors of this tax law may have thought it was a smart way to appear to "soak the rich." Actually it has no relation to "soaking the rich." What it does is protect the big fellow who still has a reserve, and tie a millstone around the neck of the little fellow. This legislation prevents the small businessman from expanding by the usual method of plowing earnings back into his organization. It is making harder and harder the re-employment of many of those at present out of work. And it is jeopardizing the job of every man and woman who today is working for a business corporation. This is the most cockeyed piece of tax legislation ever imposed in a modern country, and if I am elected I shall recommend the immediate repeal of this vicious method of taxation.

Let me add, the revision of this bill is only one of the changes needed in our tax system. Our whole tax structure, Federal and State, needs overhauling.

Money's Worth.

This leads us to the second principle which I have listed—that we must make sure that our Government gets a dollar's worth for every dolar it spends. By that I mean that we must get our money's worth for the taxes we pay. We must not lose sight of the fact that it is our money that the Administration is wasting.

There are many cases in which it is quite obvious that the country as a whole gets more for the dollars spent by the Government than it would if we kept the money and spent it ourselves. I refer to such expenditures as are necessary to provide adequate protection, to maintain our courts, and to enforce our laws. These expenditures are essential if we are to live in an orderly society. They help us to maintain our political and economic liberties and to enjoy the fruits of our own labor.

For these expenditures, if they are made efficiently and with economy, we do get a dollar's worth for every dollar we spend.

Until a few years ago this type of expenditure made up the bulk of our Federal expenses. Under the present Administration that is no longer true. Today, the Administration is spending money for almost every conceivable thing. It is spending even for the necessary things in ways we can not afford—in reckless ways which are beyond our means—which would never appeal to anyone who has had to work for his money—to anyone who has had to face the problem of making both ends meet—to anyone who has had to see to it that his bills get paid. The Republican Party believes in being generous in the spending of money for relief and emergency purposes, but it believes that these funds should be spent without waste and absurdities.

This brings us to our third principle—that the Government, like the rest of us, should not get the habit of spending more than it receives. The present Administration seems to have entirely disregarded this principle. It is paying half of its bills with borrowed money. The truth is we are living in a fool's paradise—far beyond our income.

We all know this cannot continue indefinitely, because we have known persons who have tried it. We have seen them go along for a while with apparent ease, buying first one thing and then another which they could not afford. And then we have seen them wind up "on the rocks."

Whenever a government continues to live beyond its income, it will suffer the same fate. For a while there will seem to be no end to the money which the Government can spend. But in due time the day of reckoning must come. Someone, sometime, will have to pay the bill.

"Will-O'-the-Wisp."

How is it that the Government has been able to follow such a will-o'-the-wisp financial policy? It is because the public has not been properly informed.

We have been told that all this extravagance will be paid for by "soaking the rich." This is not possible. The figures of our Treasury Department show that if we confiscated all incomes in excess of $5,000 a year, it would not be enough to pay for the cost of our Federal Government.

Do you think that we have been getting something for nothing as the result of the huge Government spending of the last three years? Some of the debt, it is true, has been shifted to the wealthy, but the major portion of the debt, both the principal and the interest, is being charged up against ourselves and our children. There is no other group to whom we can shift the burden, and it is a burden that gets heavier and heavier every day that the present wasteful policies of the Administration are continued.

The final principle the Government must follow is to prepare for the rainy day. In our own families we all recognize the importance of doing this and we try to build up individual reserves.

In the case of the Government the equivalent of these reserves is the ability to borrow. It protects this ability by keeping its financial house in the best possible order.

How does it do this? In periods of good times, the Government pays off its debts, so that if necessary it will be able to borrow again. It keeps its taxes as low as possible, so that there will be a reserve of tax-paying ability which can be called upon to meet emergencies. It permits its citizens to prosper, so that they will not have to go to the Government for aid at the first breath of ill-wind. These are the policies to be followed in good times. In bad times certain changes become necessary. But a financially responsible administration never loses sight of the fact that it acts at all times as a trustee of the people.

It watches every dollar it spends to be sure that it is used in the way which will do the most good. It borrows no more than is absolutely necessary, for it knows that if we exhaust our borrowing capacity today, our children will be helpless should they be called on to face an emergency.

In my judgment these are the common-sense principles that our Federal Government should follow. Unfortunately they are not the principles which have been followed by the present Administration.

In spite of the repeated assurances about a balanced budget—in October, 1932, after the banking holiday in 1933, in January, 1934, in January, 1935, and in January, 1936, what has happened?

The Administration has continued to increase expenditures, even for the regular departments, and carry us deeper and deeper into debt. The latest assurance, volunteered only 13 days ago, repeats the old story—"business is improving, revenue increasing, no new taxes will be necessary to balance the budget." How can anyone really believe this, in the face of the record of the present Administration?

It has piled deficit upon deficit. It has increased our public debt until today the total is equal to two-thirds of the annual income of every man, woman and child in the United States.

It has created an atmosphere of spendthrift generosity that has made it impossible for it to restore economy in government expenditures.

It has acted as if it were willing to give the whole Treasury away, trying to enrich everybody by impoverishing everybody else.

The time has come to put an end to these policies. We must establish a system of simple, honest bookkeeping. We must return to the principles which we follow in the handling of our own finances.

This will give us a Government able to meet every reasonable demand made upon it; a Government fully prepared to assume its increasing financial responsibilities; a Government able to meet the needs that arise from any emergency; a Government that will leave our children a fair chance to solve the problems that arise in their time.

That is the kind of Government we must have if we are to get rid of unemployment by giving our workers real jobs at good pay. I know that accomplishing all this is not a task that can be completed overnight, and I make no such promise. We have huge responsibilities that we must continue to meet. But with the help of a courageous country it is a task that can and will be done. That is my pledge to the American people.

All Ears, Wrong Tongue.

New York, Aug. 26 (U.P.).—Magistrate Alfred Lindau today wanted to hear Mrs. Annie Fisher's own story of how Mrs. Julia Cusick stole $500, so he took his entire court staff to her bedside—only to learn that she cannot speak English.

comes of individuals and corporations."

But at the same time he warned that New Deal "extravagance" could not be paid for by "soaking the rich," adding that, according to Treasury figures, "if we confiscated all incomes in excess of $5,000 a year, it would not be enough to pay for the cost of our Federal Government." One-half of the present Federal bill, he pointed out, is being paid with borrowed money. He further warned the country that it is "living in a fool's paradise—far beyond our income."

Assault Is Vigorous.

Even if Gov. Landon had not blasted the undistributed profits tax, his speech tonight would have been notable for the vigorous assault it contained on other aspects of Federal financial policy—chiefly on the spending side. The frontal attack he made tonight on the New Deal represented a change of pace from the more general and moderate-toned speeches which he has delivered in this campaign.

He contended the New Deal fiscal policies were leading the Nation to financial catastrophe "on the rocks," the latter a phrase borrowed from a warning of President Roosevelt in 1933 against profligate spending. Gov. Landon further maintained New Deal spending and its "will o' the wisp financial policy" had created "a staggering public debt," which he reiterated several times, was "closing the door of opportunity to your children and my children."

The Kansas Governor asserted the Roosevelt Administration is "spending money for almost every conceivable thing," doing it in "wasteful" fashion and "in reckless ways which are beyond our means—which would never appeal to anyone who has had to work for his money; to anyone who has had to face the problem of making both ends meet; to anyone who has had to see to it that his bills get paid."

In that passage some observers believed the Republican nominee made a direct, if veiled, thrust at President Roosevelt, who inherited his wealth and has never been forced to work for a living, as Gov. Landon has.

The Kansan accused the Roosevelt Administration of creating an atmosphere of "spendthrift generosity that has made it impossible for it to restore economy in Government expenditures" and that it has acted "as if it were willing to give the whole Treasury away, trying to enrich everybody by impoverishing everybody else."

He struck at the recent Administration announcement to the effect that business improvement made it unnecessary to levy new taxes to balance the budget. He asked "how can anyone really believe this, in the face of the record of the present Administration?"

Gov. Landon did not project any abstract promises of a balanced budget. He declared that the situation called for establishment of a "system of simple, honest bookkeeping" and an Administration of financial responsibility by getting a dollar's value for every dollar spent, imposing an equitable tax system; paying off the national debt in order to secure the national credit and borrowing no more than is "absolutely necessary."

A government guided by such principles, he said, is essential "if we are to get rid of unemployment by giving our workers real jobs at good pay." But he added that he knew "accomplishing all this is not a task that can be completed overnight, and I make no such promise." His only pledge, he said, was that he would seek to meet these huge responsibilities courageously.

Speech Called Effective.

Most persons, both among Republican leaders who gathered here to attend tonight's rally and impartial observers, regarded the speech as an effective political document. He struck the New Deal a hard blow, it was argued, in one of its vulnerable spots and he did it in a way that would attract general attention.

The merit of the address was held to be clarity and simplicity of expression. Gov. Landon did not make his speech dreary by citing astronomic figures representing the annual New Deal expenditures and public debt.

Instead, he reduced the whole question of Federal fiscal policy to the personal level of the average man and woman, even when he was discussing the somewhat complicated tax on undistributed corporation profits. In that part of the speech he undertook to show how the tax made the task of re-employing America's idle millions more difficult and how it jeopardized those now working for corporations.

When discussing other taxes, Gov. Landon pointed out that the man who smokes one package of cigarettes daily pays the Federal Government a tax of $22 annually, that the indirect Federal taxes paid by each family in the country average $5 a month, that Federal, State and local taxes amounted to 20 cents out of every dollar spent, and that two cents in the cost of each 10-cent loaf of bread represents the cost of Government.

He struck an analogy between Government fiscal policy and the principles which guide and individual in his personal affairs, pointing out that Government can not create money but must get it from its citizens and that "every time the Government spends a dollar that dollar must be paid by us or we must pass the debt on to be paid by our children."

Gov. Landon maintained four common-sense principles should guide governmental fiscal policy as well as that of the individual, and that if government adhered to these principles its people prospered, but if it did not "it squanders our resources and destroys the public credit."

In broadest terms he held these principles to be:

"The Government must guard and preserve its source of income."

Finally the Government must prepare for the rainy day.

It was in the elaboration of these four principles that Gov. Landon disclosed his attitude toward Federal finances and spending. Under the preservation of income principle he flayed the tax on undistributed corporation profits and revealed his hostility to indirect taxes and pointing out the inability of the rich to pay the full cost of the New Deal.

Under the prudent spending principle he explored New Deal expenditures, branding them as wasteful and reckless in many cases, but he made it clear he would not curb expenditures for needed and useful functions which the Government should properly undertake. This led to a denunciation of government living beyond its income and thus jeopardizing its credit and exhausting its source of tax income when the "rainy day comes."

Security System Urged at Parley

Yosemite, Calif., Aug. 26 (AP).—Observers of international affairs, citing possibilities of war in the Far East, urged before the Institute of Pacific Relations today the adoption of some collective security system for the world.

James G. McDonald, New York editorial writer, asserted lasting peace would be impossible unless the western nations recognized the "special position" of Japan in the Far East as well as China's determination to retain her integrity.

He said Japan must recognize the stake of western nations in the Orient.

Proponents of the collective system were J. W. DaFoe, editor of the Winnipeg Press; H. J. Van Mock, of the Netherlands, and F. W. Eggleston, of Melbourne, Australia. They joined McDonald in advocating the plan.

Film Completes Cycle for Love Story of Juliet

This Divine Tale Now Has Been Made the Subject of Every Major Art.

With the release of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's film production of "Romeo and Juliet," which comes to the National Theater on Sunday evening, September 6, the bard of Stratford-on-Avon's romantic tale will have found artistic expression in every conceivable form.

The story of Romeo and Juliet has been the inspiration of novelist, poet, dramatist, sculptor, composer, artist and musician for centuries. All have found the saga of two lovers, frustrated by the enmity of their parents, an intriguing theme.

Written First by Italian.

Because of the universality of its appeal, it is difficult to trace the story to its original writer. The romance of Romeo and Juliet was first recorded in novel form by an Italian author, Luigi da Porta, in 1530.

It was translated into French in 1559 by Boisteau, who inspired Arthur Brooke's poem in 1562, and it was from this poem that Shakespeare garnered the idea for his love classic.

Two composers, Zingarelli and Bellini, wrote operas based on "Romeo and Juliet," which were long popular. It is interesting to note that in the first opera Juliet was sung by a soprano, while in the second a contralto sang the role.

Saluted by Tschaikovsky.

Gounod's opera remains a perennial favorite, with Juliet's famous waltz song increasing yearly in popularity. The musical salute to the story is furnished by Tschaikovsky's overture.

Innumerable artists and sculptors have made the "balcony scene" subjects of their works. "Romeo and Juliet" is represented in every art which mankind appreciates.

George Cukor, who directed "David Copperfield," lent his directorial talents to the picture and Talbot Jennings, prominent writer and Shakespearean scholar, made the adaptation.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Tintypes.

Hollywood, Aug. 26.

William Shakespeare: Hollywood took up his option. He was given a tryout with an opus called "A Midsummer Night's Dream," and then given a contract for "Romeo and Juliet."

NORMA SHEARER.

He was tintyped here when the flicker, "A Midsummer Night's Dream," opened. But if Hollywood took up the option so can we, because you should know all about this new Hollywood writer.

He was born on April 23, 1564, in a little house on Stratford-on-Avon. His name, Shakespeare, is listed on various town documents spelled many ways, including Shaxpeare.

• • • •

He was a wild youngster, always in mischief. He left school at the age of 13. He was often arrested for deer stealing.

• • • •

He started his theatrical career at the Globe Theater in London by holding the horses for the gentlemen who came to see the play. He later became an actor, and then began to assist in the writing of the plays presented at the Globe. They had repertory, and a new play was needed for every performance. All the leading playwrights would chip in and contribute different scenes to the same play.

His favorite eating place is the Mermaid Tavern. His best friends are Kit Marlowe and Ben Jonson. He likes nothing better than to stand up at the bar and sing off-color songs with Jonson. He holds his liquor well, but there are occasions when he's found hugging the floor.

The first play he ever wrote was "Love's Labor Lost." It was not, as many believe, written for Peggy Hopkins Joyce. The "Romeo and Juliet" yarn was lifted and did not originate with him. The story is to be found in some of the early Greek plays.

• • • •

He never uses the subway. He never listens to the radio. He never sends a telegram. He never telephones. He writes all his plays in longhand. He doesn't know how to use a typewriter.

About the Showshops

YESTERDAY'S brief recitation in this space of the attractions that will occupy the greater part of the time between September 6 and the Yuletide holidays at the National Theater made it clearly evident that the Theater Guild has no intention of falling down on the job of providing three plays of the first rank as its part of the subscription season sponsored by the American Theater Society of Washington.

BELL.

Not that the Guild ever has fallen down on the job, but once or twice its fulfillment of its obligation has been stretched across a far greater span of months than now promises to be the case.

According to the bookings disclosed by Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran, of the National, between these column rules yesterday, the Theater Guild will have discharged its official obligations to local subscription patrons before the first of the year.

The first of the Guild's productions will come along as early as the week of October 5, if present expectations materialize, when "And Stars Remain" will be the bill. This is the play in which Clifton Webb, one of the more debonair and agile of the song-and-dance men, will make his debut as an actor of straight dramatic roles. The beautiful and richly versatile Helen Gahagan will be Mr. Webb's costar in the enterprise. Miss Gahagan has been opera, dramatic and film star in the course of her career and in private life is the wife of Melvyn Douglas, to be seen as one of Joan Crawford's four leading men in the world premiere of "The Gorgeous Hussy," at Loew's Palace tonight.

The second of the Guild's local offerings in the new season will be "End of Summer," the S. N. Behrman comedy, in which Ina Claire and Osgood Perkins assume the principal roles. This is an item of proved worth due at the National on Monday evening, October 12.

The production which will absolve the Theater Guild from further worry, insofar as its three Washington bookings are concerned, will be "Jane Eyre," vehicle of Katharine Hepburn's reappearance upon the boards, adapted to dramatic uses by Helen Jerome from the Charlotte Bronte novel. Helen Jerome will be most readily identified in the theatergoing public's mind as the author of "Pride and Prejudice," the eminently successful dramatization of the Jane Austen novel—a feat no one suspected could be accomplished with such brilliant results.

In such manner does the Theater Guild find itself in the clear, as the saying goes, at an unusually early juncture in the impending season.

There are, of course, three other plays to be presented under the auspices of the American Theater Society, but they should be coming along without too much pother in a season promising as much as the one about to open.

The Messrs. Harry P. Somerville, the jovial boniface who presides over the handsome destinies of the Willard, and Carter Tate Barron, head showman of the Loew forces in the Washington territory, have graciously signified their intention to host a band of hungry newsmen in Mr. Somerville's inn tonight at 6, preliminary to the later world premiere of "The Gorgeous Hussy." The idea at the bottom of the whole delightful business, no doubt, is that drama desks are less fatuous when fed. Less fatuous, possibly, but no less fat. However, having experienced the ne plus ultra hospitality of both these gentlemen on many previous occasions, I am in a position to tell you right now that a pleasant time was had by all.

The twelfth and final Summer Festival Program, under the joint sponsorship of the Community Center Department and Capital Parks office, will be held in the National Sylvan Theater, on the Monument Grounds, next Tuesday night at 8 o'clock. The program will consist of folk music and spirituals presented by the Tempo Choral Club of Washington, conducted by W. Scott Mayo. This will be the third annual appearance of this experienced vocal ensemble in the Sylvan Theater.

• • • •

In response to a ceaseless barrage of inquiries concerning the matter, this column ventures the opinion that Loew's Palace is entirely sold out for the "Gorgeous Hussy" world premiere at 8:30 tonight. This is predicated upon the more or less positive assurance that no more than 100 tickets for public sale remained available as long ago as yesterday morning. The special midnight performance, beginning at 12 o'clock, will offer a better chance. So now you know. (Editorial aside: And we have no influence whatsoever with the White House Correspondents Association, sponsoring the premiere. Lucky if we get in ourself.)

Surely Miss Barnard, if no one else, will be interested to know that Washington was not left out of the prize awards in a recent contest conducted by McBride's, the book publisher.

Robert M. McBride & Co. has announced that M. F. Long, of Great Neck, Long Island, won first award in the contest for the best screen casting of Warwick Deeping's novel, "Marriage by Conquest." A little farther down the page bulletin, it is disclosed that fourth prize was won by Miss Betty Barnard, of Washington, D. C.

I have no way of knowing whom Miss Barnard picked for her principals, but Mr. Long didn't do so badly in choosing Ann Harding, Brian Aherne and Charles Laughton to head his cast.

When the Rialto Theater reopens under an entirely new policy next month, it is highly probable that a long-neglected feature of motion picture house entertainment will be restored to public favor. That would be regular pipe organ programs in addition to the screen fare. Mrs. Louise Noonan Miller and Abe Tolkins, of the Little Theater, under whose direction the Rialto will operate, are known to be in favor of this resumption of a once widely popular feature of all motion picture bills. In this connection, it would be interesting to know definitely the sum total of the money investment in pipe organs that are now lying idle and neglected in the Capital's picture houses. They represent a great many thousands of dollars.

Learn-One-Thing-Each-Day Note.

It should be made clear to the theater managements that the term "organ stop" in the instruments' voluminous books of specifications does not at all mean the same as "stop organ." They seem to think it does.

Four Funsters in New Filmusical Comedy

Observations.

Patsy Kelly is beginning to believe that she is a jinx . . . Jean Malin died in her company, then her partner, Thelma Todd, was killed, and now her manager, Ralph Farnum, has passed along . . . Alice Faye is in town . . . She gave me her formula for success: "Lots of luck and lots of hard work" . . . That sums it up . . . Now that Sir Stork has arrived at the Wayne Kings, he'll give up aviation . . . That was Katharine Cornell with G. McClintic at "21" . . . And next to them Truman (Fox) Talley, Ben Finney, Mrs. Jack Pearl, Mrs. Morton Downey . . . Jack Pearl may land the Vinton Freedley show lead . . . Irving Berlin sends all his wires and telegrams via Postal, the Mackay system . . . In the old days, they named cigars after celebrities . . . Now they name horses . . . Charlie Washburn's "Come Into My Parlor," a biography of the Everleigh Sisters, of Chicago, is a switch on the horse-naming practice . . . It is dedicated to John (News) Chapman . . . Charlie describes the sisters as "flowers in the garden of weeds" . . . Not widow weeds?

ALICE FAYE.

Notre Dame gridders send me a few instructions on the eve of leaving for Europe . . . "Find out if it's true what they say about Uncle Bill at Avon," wires Bill Shakespeare . . . And Barney Ross wires: "Say hello to my Uncle Izzy in Dublin" . . . At that Barney's wire isn't so exaggerated . . . A Cohn was Mayor of Dublin for years . . .

• • • •

Local stores have hit a new hysteria in charm bracelets: small gold coffins with removable corpses . . . Ugh-h-h . . . Broadway is beginning to get hot: "Follies" is rehearsing at the Winter Garden, the Cotton Club is in rehearsal at the old Palais Royale, and the fall shows are whipping into shape at the Hollywood and Paradise . . .

The steamship tickets are bought, the passport and the visas arranged . . . At noon, tomorrow, your roaming reporter will be waving adieu from the deck of the Ile de France . . . I haven't been so excited in years . . . Last time I ever felt like this was back in Port Chester as a kid . . . Jim Merritt was then sheriff of Westchester County, and annually he'd give a picnic to the kids of the village . . .

Film Premiere Features Week In Playhouses

'Gorgeous Hussy' in World Bow Tonight Ushers in New Programs.

"The Gorgeous Hussy," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's picturization of the novel of the same name by Samuel Hopkins Adams, will be given its world premiere at Loew's Palace Theater tonight at 8:30, with a special midnight performance to follow at 12 o'clock. The title role in this picture is played by Joan Crawford. The star is supported by four leading men in the persons of Franchot Tone, Robert Taylor, James Stewart and Melvyn Douglas, and a d' guished cast led by Lionel Barrymore, Beulah Bondi, Sidney Toler, Frank Conroy and others of note. Clarence Brown directed. The story has its locale in the Washington, D. C., of the early nineteenth century, with much of the action centering in George Town, as it then was known. The leading character is Peggy O'Neale, reputedly the power behind the Administration of Andrew Jackson, "Old Hickory." Tonight's premiere is under the auspices of the White House Correspondents Association and one of the Capital's most brilliant audiences is expected to be in attendance.

With Gertrude Michael cast in the role of the titular character, "The Return of Sophie Lang" will be presented as chief feature of the screen bill at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. In this story of jewel thieves and the law, Miss Michael is supported by Sir Guy Standing, Ray Milland and other deft actors. On the stage, the entertainment will be provided by Will Osborne and his "Slide" Orchestra as headliner, with Dick and Dorothy Rogers as featured specialists. Others on the bill will include Bob Hall, "that extemporaneous fellow," and Ruthie Barnes, "the tops in taps."

Ann Sothern and Gene Raymond are the costars of "Walking on Air," the new RKO-Radio production, adapted from the story of "Count Pete" and cleverly tricked out with musical embellishments, which will inaugurate a week's engagement as chief screen feature at RKO-Keith's tomorrow. The program will be augmented by short subjects of varied interest and the latest issue of the Pathe News, reflecting important world events of the past week.

A new screen musicial with a strong bent toward comedy will occupy the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, when "Sing, Baby, Sing" will be the feature of the bill. In this gay subject the principal roles are taken by Adolphe Menjou, Patsy Kelly, Ted Healy, Gregory Ratoff and Alice Faye. The story concerns a famous actor who is chased across the country by an admiring female. On the stage, both comedy and music will be provided by Frank and Milt Britton and their lunatic band of destructive madmen who are a riot of fun. The Frazee Sisters also are important on the living portion of the week's bill—two fascinating young singers and dancers already known to local audiences.

W. C. Fields, Rochelle Hudson, Catherine Doucet, Richard Cromwell and the others in the cast of "Poppy" will continue the downtown popularity of that amusing screen comedy of wagon show life at the Columbia Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. "Home on the Range," a comedy; added short subjects and newsreel will complete the bill.

Today will mark the last day of the downtown run of the Warner Brothers' film version of Marc Connelly's Biblical fable of "The Green Pastures," at the Metropolitan Theater. Rex Ingram appears in the role of De Lawd, created on the stage by the late Richard B. Harrison. "Green Pastures" will be followed by a current hit to be announced later.

"Calvalcade," costarring Diana Wynyard and Clive Brook, will be continued on the screen at the Little Theater throughout the remainder of the current week. On Sunday it will be permanently withdrawn from circulation and will be succeeded at the Little by the Hecht and MacArthur production of "The Scoundrel," starring Noel Coward in his only picture. Mr. Coward is supported by Alexander Woollcott, Stanley Ridges, Julie Haydon and a notable cast.

At the Roadside Theater, "Among the Moonshiners" will continue throughout this week and next and then will be supplanted by "Arizona," the final production of the season. "Arizona" was selected for a repeat engagement by popular vote.

Hot, humid weather these past few weeks have romped attendance figures at Glen Echo Park up to their season's peak. The many exciting rides, cool groves and the Crystal Pool are potent antidotes for midcity discomfort and are attracting huge crowds both day and night. Glen Echo may now be said to be entering the home stretch of its most successful season. It will remain in full operation through Labor Day.

The Gayety Theater will inaugurate its new season of 1936-37 next Sunday afternoon at 2:30, with Hinda Wausau and her "Hindu Belles," a new Independent Burlesque Association production, in which George Broadhurt and I. B. Hamp are the featured comedians. The Gayety will operate this season on the same policy that has been in force in the past—three performances a day at 12 m., 2:30 and 8:20 p. m., popular prices, and smoking permitted.

Running for Car, Man Trips Over Child, Is Hurt

Injured yesterday when he stumbled over a child while running to catch a street car, William P. Morris, 75, of 458 H street northwest, was in a serious condition in Emergency Hospital last night.

The elderly man suffered fractures of both arms, physicians reported. The youngster who darted into his path disappeared after the accident.

"Old Hickory" Harangues the Mob

A. F. G. E. Test.

Whether a compromise between the conservative and so-called "new deal" wings of the A. F. G. E. is still possible is likely to be settled at tomorrow's meeting of the District department in the Hotel Hamilton.

Should the conservative bloc, led by National Treasurer Cecil E. Custer, Vice Presidents Michael D. Schaefer, Ira Y. Bain and G. Carroll Dimond and Department President James G. Yaden, put through their amendment depriving temporary chartered lodges of representation, a knock-down, finish fight with the left-wingers is likely. Buoyed by their victory in the District, the conservatives are virtually certain to go into the Detroit convention with plans for amending the constitution to oust the new deal lodges.

Defeat of the temporary charter amendment, however, might pave the way for the adoption by the Detroit convention of a "center" program which would leave room for both the conservatives and new dealers. Should a sizeable proportion of the middle-of-the-ground lodges in the District swing over to the "new deal" side on the amendment vote, conservative leaders are likely to be less insistent upon the ousting of the new deal bloc.

Skilled parliamentary maneuverings are expected at tomorrow's department meeting. The delegates will resume their deliberations in executive session with the proposed amendment the first order of business. Debate is expected to be limited and a vote sought as quickly as possible.

Should the amendment be adopted, representatives of the temporary chartered lodges will immediately be deprived of any further vote in the proceedings. The second amendment, permitting the department to refuse to seat any lodge delegate or to unseat a delegate already accepted, will be brought before a vote. With the "new deal" bloc weakened by the deprivation of the temporary chartered lodge votes, conservatives expect the second amendment also will pass.

If that happens, representatives of new deal lodges will find themselves in the position of either turning the other cheek or risking a motion by conservative delegates that they be thrown out of the department. Tomorrow's meeting may yet wind up with a "purge" of the new deal delegates.

Fall Singing.

The thermometer may say that summer is still here, but there are signs that fall is just around the corner. The other night the Social Security Board songsters started organizing for their autumn song program and now the Department of Agriculture Chorus is getting set for the fall.

Plans of the Agriculture Chorus are to be settled fairly definitely at a meeting September 10, but Robert F. Freund, the director, has given us a fair idea of what the coming season's program will consist.

The first event will be a "Gay Nineties" program with the chorus rendering such old-time favorites as "A Bicycle Built For Two," "Rosie O'Grady," "East Side, West Side" and "Whoa Emma." To add reality the songsters will wear Gay Nineties costumes and will punctuate their songs with skits and gestures that will make you think of Barnum and Diamond Jim Brady. A German band is to be hired and there's a possibility that the whole production will be staged in a beer garden.

The chorus also plans to observe Thanksgiving with a cantata of Maunder's song of Thanksgiving, and Christmas and Easter with appropriate programs. Last but not least of the chorus plans is the launching of a drive for funds for a piano for the Agriculture Auditorium.

Two of the four study tours that have been arranged for the scientists of 50 foreign lands in this country for the Third World Power Conference will start today. One of the tours will be managed by D. S. Loane, William Warne and L. M. Davis; the other by Maurice Holland, D. T. Braymer, W. E. Caldwell and Willard Crane. Later in the week two other tours will be organized with W. L. McAvey, A. K. Berle and Charles Layng as the guides.

WPA Overtime.

An administrative order on the question of accrued overtime at the WPA is to be issued tomorrow or Friday by Corrington Gill, assistant administrator.

Although Gill said no "agreement" had bene finally reached, the order is to cover the points discussed by him and several representatives of WPA Lodge 139 on Wednesday afternoon. Some of the demands of the workers, Gill said, might not be able to be worked out legally, but he predicted the order "probably will be nine-tenths satisfactory to the employes."

Among the points to be covered will be the question of whether the workers are to receive additional leave for their accrued overtime, how this leave is to be taken, and also what is to be done in the future regarding overtime.

Those who conferred with Gill were Arthur Stein, Langdon West and Nancy Hart.

Drs. Herbert B. Boyd and Carl B. Robbins have been given new positions with the AAA. Boyd, who formerly was assistant director of the northeast division and of the tobacco, sugar, rice, peanuts and potato section, has been made the new director of the insular division, while Robbins is to be the new assistant chief of the sugar section.

Applications until August 31 for the position of supervisor of boys at the National Training School for Boys, Washington, D. C., will be accepted until Monday.

The entrance salary is $1,320 a year, less deductions of 3½ per cent toward retirement and $300 a year for quarters and subsistence.

Applicants must show that they have had a least three months' experinece of appropriate character.

Full information and application blanks may be obtained from the manager of the Fourth United States Civil Service District, Seventh and F streets northwest.

The Gorgeous Hussy

A Cinema Serialization of the Life Story Story of Lovely Peggy O'Neale—Daughter of an Innkeeper, Confidante of a President.

THE GORGEOUS HUSSY.

Synopsis.

What has happened so far: Peggy O'Neale, unsophisticated but charming daughter of the keeper of the Franklin Inn, Washington's most popular tavern in 1823, has made the mistake of accepting a secret rendezvous with a traveling salesman, Prof. La Roy Sunderland. Substituting force when guile fails, Sunderland tries to abduct Peggy. She is saved by her colored servant, but Sunderland, injured in the fight, brings a marauding mob to capture the servant and burn him.

CHAPTER THREE.

Invaders Routed.

John Randolph found a blacksnake whip, and, beating about him with superhuman energy, forced his way to the side of Andrew Jackson. Some of the men who felt Randolph's lash about their face decided they had had enough of combat. Others pressed forward in an attempt to keep Jackson from shouting instructions to those standing in the doorway of the inn.

One of the mob leaders decided that the best way to break the morale of the defense would be to spirit Peggy away. He called a husky colleague to his side, and silently the two advanced from behind as the girl stood in the shadow of the servants' lodge. With a scream, at the last minute, she saw them and pulled back. The men reached out to seize her, as she turned and slipped.

Heroic intervention came from an unexpected source. Bow Timberlake, wearing a white flannel shirt that he had hastily donned, looked from his second-floor window, saw what was happening, and made a flying leap. He landed astride one of Peggy's assailants, and, dispatching him with a swift blow, whirled to give the same treatment to the other.

On all sides the battle still raged, but some of the invaders who came carrying too heavy a load of liquor were beginning to feel its effects. Many of the attacking force were bunched up, struggling with one another. Others decided they had absorbed enough punishment and vanished.

The turning point of the fray was the appearance of Rachel Jackson at an upstairs window. Swinging a bucket of boiling water with a praticed hand, she brought a resounding moan from her human targets below. Gen. Jackson looked up in wild-eyed approval.

"Cast wider, my love" he shouted. "Wider it is, Gin'ral" called back Rachel, registering a perfect bull's-eye with the second bucket.

A moment later the mob was in disorderly retreat. Hands protecting the backs of their burning necks, the attackers rushed for the front gate. Those who still lagged behind were quickly taken in hand by the home force.

"I have caused a rumpus, haven't I?" Peggy asked her rescuer, barely conscious of the fact that his arm had been encircling her waist for the past three minutes.

"Next time you want to get abducted," smiled back Bow, "I advise you to send for a sailor." Impulsively he kissed her, then bade her good night.

When Peggy was escorted back to her room, her father making a vigorous effort to control his anger, she could think only of one thing. That was not the smiling face of Bow Timberlake; it was the remarkable display of courage and strength shown by John Randolph. He, a man averse by nature to physical combat, had literally bludgeoned a whole crowd into submission. She felt a tug at her heart when she reflected on the ungracious way in which she had received his interference that afternoon. He had been so very right about everything, and she so misled.

Acting on sudden impulse, Peggy pulled a dressing gown about her and went down the hall to Randolph's room, carrying a lighted candle. She wanted to knock, but couldn't quite make up her mind. Randolph, who was standing at the window, heard the slight sound of footsteps and, stepping to the door, opened it himself.

"What is it, Margaret?" he asked anxiously. "Is something wrong?"

"I've come to talk to you, John," said Peggy in a determined voice.

"What shall we talk about?" asked Randolph guardedly, closing the door behind her.

"About ourselves!" flung out Peggy. "About you—and me. The time has come when we've got to face the truth." She stepped closer to him. "John, I love you."

"Love me?" queried Randolph, for once devoid of all his statesmanlike assurance.

"Yes," she replied. "You seem to be the only one in Washington who doesn't know it—who hasn't known it for years!"

"Peggy," interrupted Randolph, "you're only 19."

"Stop it, John!" she cried. "Do you think Rowdy was talking to a child when he asked me to marry him? Perhaps Bow Timberlake would rather have given me a doll tonight, than a kiss? And Prof. Sunderland, was he going to carry me off to buy me toys. I've loved you since I was old enough to spell the word. Now I'm old enough to tell you about it!"

"Wait, Peggy," interposed Randolph. "Try to understand. What have we that we can claim together? Your interests should be singing, dancing, enjoying yourself. My head buzzes with tariffs, by-laws, states' rights. Peggy, if I did love you, it could be for tonight, tomorrow, the next day or week, but then what? You'd hate me. I won't have that."

"I love you," answered Peggy quietly.

"I'm sorry then," said Randolph, after a barely perceptible hesitation. "I don't love you, Peggy."

"You're a liar, John Randolph," answered Peggy, putting her arms around his neck.

By a rigid effort of will Randolph restrained himself, disengaged her arms, drew back. Peggy turned quickly and left the room.

Two nights later the tumult of the battle at the inn had been forgotten in plans for a gala hay ride. The only problem, so far as Peggy was concerned, was the matter of an escort. She found herself provided with two, Bow Timberlake and Rowdy Dow, and, rather than turn down either one flatly, she sandwiched herself between them on the hay rick.

When the party arrived at their destination, Joab Oxenrider's Pike House, festivities were well under way. Dancing, games, solos on the flute and harmonica, and volunteer amateur entertainment all helped to make the affair a huge success. Peggy looked more flushed and lovely than ever in a new evening dress. She felt much more interested in Bow than in Rowdy, but she tried hard to maintain an impassive neutrality as she danced with her two escorts.

Suddenly there came a reverberating crash of thunder. Everyone rushed to the windows. A torrent of rain began to pelt across the glass.

"We can never start back in this," said Peggy anxiously.

Frau Oxenrider, a resourceful Dutch matron, pondered a moment, then came forward with a safe and novel solution. It would never do to send the young people home in this inclement weather, and there was a way by which they could remain overnight.

"I will sew you all in one big bundle!" she cried. "The boys in one, the girls in another."

Everyone agreed, amid much laughter. The old Puritan custom of bundling was a rarity in nineteenth century Washington, but here was one occasion where it had come splendidly to the rescue.

Frau Oxenrider first sewed the boys, one by one, within the folds of a single large mattress. Then she applied the same precautionary measures to the girls. The mattresses were placed vis-a-vis, with the girls' heads one way, the boys' the other. Bow, by a bit of deft strategy, contrived to find a place directly opposite Peggy; for once he had managed to get ahead of Rowdy, although it didn't seem under prevailing restrictions.

likely it would do him much good

The lights were blown out, and all was still. One by one the overnight guests, fagged out by their strenuous exercise, dropped off to a blissful slumber. After a while Peggy, straining her eyes in the dark, became aware that Bow, a sew inches away, was mumbling to himself.

"What are you doing?" she whispered.

"Counting sheep," he replied.

"I thought you were asleep," she rejoined.

"I can't sleep," said Bow. "I'm thinking about something."

"What is it?"

"I was just wondering how you could possibly slap my face if I were to kiss you."

"I'd find a way," said Peggy.

"You mean you'd punish me for a little thing like that?"

"Yes," answered Peggy.

An unusually heavy clap of thunder sounded outside.

"Hear that?" said Bow. "That's my heart—asking you to marry me."

"Is it?" asked Peggy.

"Yes," said Bow, straining his head forward. "My lips have gone as far as they can, alone."

Peggy quivered. Bow wanted her love, and John Randolph didn't. If her first choice were denied, why not take second best? In the darkness she strained forward, and the compact was sealed by a kiss.

Sylvan Theater

The Community Center Department presents the eleventh Summer Festival Program, at the National Sylvan Theater. Reviewed Wednesday evening by W. A. Whitney.

THE PROGRAM.

CONCERT by the Washington Civic Orchestra, under the direction of Samuel Page Ford.

"THE GAME OF CHESS." The Theater Group of the Federal Bureau of Investigation presents the drama in one act by Kenneth Sawyer Goodman, under the direction of Lawrence Beckerman.

"CAVALLERIA RUSTICANA." The Estelle Wentworth Opera Group presents the opera in two scenes by Mascagni, under the direction and with accompaniment by Miss Wentworth.

Strong drama in prose and song were combined with telling effect last evening as the Theater Group of the FBI presented their prize-winning production of "The Game of Chess" and Estelle Wentworth Opera Group re-presented "Cavalleria Rusticana."

Receiving unstinted praise in the recent one-act play tournament—and in its subsequent broadcast—the G-Men again scored in the Goodman drama of Russia. Clarence W. Moore, as the provincial governor, and John Hurley, as the young terrorist, re-enacted their fascinating battle of wits, philosophy and words. Clayton Braathen and Lawrence Beckerman completed the cast.

In music, the Estelle Wentworth opera group's production of "Cavalleria Rusticana" was no less dramatically thrilling. Alma Harris, as the girl in the case, and Ray Baine and Harry Leide, the friends turned enemies, led the company to another triumph for the unit. The other principals were Alice Brennan and Nina Norman, who added their voices to the general excellence of the production.

Preceding the dramatic portions of the program, Samuel Page Ford led the Washington Civic Orchestra through an interesting and well played program, including "Ruy Blas" (Bartholdy), three dances from German's "Nell Gwyn" suite, "Over the Waves" (Rosas), and selections from the later opera.

The South Still Solid.

Whatever havoc the New Deal may have played with traditional party alignments in some parts of the country, it is apparent that its power to disrupt the Democracy of the South is negligible.

The overwhelming victories of Senator Harrison and Senator Byrnes in the Mississippi and South Carolina primary elections strengthen the belief that the anti-Administration sentiment of Southern Democrats has either been overrated or else its significance as a factor in electoral contests has been greatly exaggerated. Whatever the reasons may be, however, the South is presenting a traditionally solid front to the Republican enemy. According to the Institute of Public Opinion's poll, all the Southern States, including the borderline States of Virginia and Kentucky, seem to be safely within the Democratic fold.

The collapse of the Talmadge effort to organize an opposition to the Administration is an almost forgotten episode in the swift march of events. But more significant of the direction in which the political currents are running in the Southern States is the attitude of Senator Glass. The senior Senator from Virginia has frequently been a merciless critic of various New Deal policies. Now he asserts his intention to vote for President Roosevelt and announces that he "never had any other idea, despite reports to the contrary."

The attitude of Senator Glass is typical of a large proportion of Southern voters. However they may rage, however heartily they may condemn specific policies of the Democratic Party, they are seldom weaned away from their allegiance to the party label. Knowing the attitude of his constituents, the candidate for re-election has little encouragement to discuss public issues strictly on their merits. That perhaps explains why personal invective and appeals to prejudice instead of reason are too often characteristic of the Southern type of political oratory.

Towards Local Control

The Washington and Suburban Companies, a Massachusetts common law trust, has informed the SEC that it proposes to sell its holdings of stock in the Washington Gas Light Co. and two gas companies in Alexandria and Hyattsville. The decision of the trust to divest itself of control of the local gas company is due to the fact that the present arrangement has not been financially successful.

Eventually the complicated system of intercorporate relationships linking the Washington Gas Light Co. to various outside holding company groups would no doubt have to be broken up in order to conform with the provisions of the utilities holding company act, if that is upheld as constitutional.

Immediately, however, the pressure is economic. The stock was purchased at prices far above its present value and was deposited together with other assets as collateral security for a $6,500,000 bond issue of the Washington and Suburban Companies. The proceeds of the announced sale of this stock are to be used to retire the bonds and make payments on preferred stock.

So far as the District Public Utilities Commission is concerned, the decision is welcomed as a means of clearing up the question of ownership of a local utility subject to its jurisdiction. The concern now holding over 80 per cent of the stock of the Washington Gas Light Co. was set up as a common law trust in order to circumvent legal prohibitions upon shifts of control without the commission's approval. It is only a cog in an intricate and socially undesirable system of interlocking holding companies which makes it difficult to determine where control is really located. Although abuses cited by the PUC a few years ago are no longer in evidence, the PUC will nevertheless be relieved to have this stock placed directly in the hands of the public.

As Acting Commissioner Keech has stated, it is the hope of the commission that the major part of the stock will be acquired locally. Local investor interest is often a better protection against abuses growing out of absentee ownership and control than the most vigilant kind of regulation or stringent prohibitory legislation. While important because of its bearing upon future policies, however, the sale of shares of the Washington Gas Light Co. to the general public will have no immediate results upon charges to local consumers.

None the less, the proposed sale of the Alexandria and Hyattsville companies to the Washington company calls for investigation by the commission to make sure that the terms of the offer are reasonable and that the interests of local consumers are fully safeguarded against excess payments. There is evident advantage in extending the control of the local company over adjacent territories which are rapidly becoming identified with the extended and integrated commercial and residential area radiating outward from the Capital.

Mr. Landon At Buffalo.

In his speech at Buffalo last night, attacking the deficit financing of the present Administration, Gov. Landon confronted what is both the easiest and the most difficult problem of his campaign. It only needs the barest summarization of the record to show, as did the Republican nominee, that "we are living in a fool's paradise—far beyond our income." But it requires much more than analysis of the national balance sheet to convince individual voters that they need worry about the obvious conclusion that "someone, sometime, will have to pay the bill." There are too many who are willing to conclude that the bill won't need to be paid in their time, nor by them.

That Gov. Landon fully realizes the extent of this casual attitude towards national finance was demonstrated last night. A large part of this campaign address was devoted to pointing out the growth of indirect taxation under the New Deal, with the result that "those of our citizens with small incomes have had to pay an increased proportion of the cost of the Federal Government." If there were wider realization of the extent of hidden taxes of every kind—Mr. Landon estimates that they now take "20 cents of every dollar we spend"—the demand for governmental economy would be much more effective.

The difficulty is that such levies are taken in tiny, though continuous installments and by a procedure which in many cases keeps the small taxpayer from realizing that he is being deprived of a sizable proportion of his income. It is to extend appreciation of the cost of government, as well as to adjust levies to the individual capacity to pay, that Gov. Landon comes out for a policy whereby the "major portion" of governmental revenue would be raised "from direct taxes levied on the net incomes of individuals and corporations." This is in line with the reforms demanded by Senator La Follette and other progressive students of taxation problems. A broadening of the income tax base is one of the steps necessary to terminate the fiscal debauchery of the past three years.

Instead of such overdue reforms—and Gov. Landon points out that the "whole tax structure, Federal and State, needs overhauling"—the Roosevelt Administration has consistently preferred devious and dubious measures calculated to impede business, obstruct employment and retard recovery. The present law for the taxation of business reserves is aptly cited as a case in point. Superficially it can be regarded as legislation to "soak the rich." But analysis of this, as of other recent tax measures, reveals that while it may indeed injure business it cannot possibly inure to the benefit of the "little fellow."

To the minority who possess any economic training what Gov. Landon said last night is so obvious as to seem commonplace. But the choice of governmental leadership during the next four fateful years is not in the hands of those with economic training. It rests with an electorate containing many voters who sincerely believe the nonsense declaimed by demagogues who know only too well how to arouse human cupidity and how to evade unpalatable facts.

One of the ironies of this campaign is that while these demagogues now tend to turn on President Roosevelt, he can do little to counteract them. Having worked hard to create the impression that Government need merely open the Treasury to bring the more abundant life, the New Deal is poorly situated for effective condemnation of those who now go it one better. Thus to Gov. Landon has been handed the national responsibility of telling the homely truths which must be generally recognized if the United States is to avoid an eventual financial smash.

At Buffalo, Gov. Landon fulfilled this responsibility. In the simple, straightforward language which the country has come to recognize as charateristic of the man, he pointed out that there is no essential difference between the financial principles followed by the prudent head of a family and those followed by the prudent head of a government. In either case, deficit financing must be the exception rather than the rule; in either case, credit must be safeguarded for unpredictable emergencies; in either case sources of income must be protected and purely wasteful expenditures eliminated. For a responsible President, as for a responsible father, observance of these principles is imperative. To disregard them is to live temporarily like a spendthrift, leaving a heritage of disaster for the future.

In spite of the blandishments of revolving pensions, Federal subsidies, guaranteed jobs and special bonuses, the American people still understand the fundamental value of economy. They remember the homely fable of the ant and the grasshopper. And, as at Buffalo, they will pay close heed to a doctrine differing from that of the merry monarch of France who rightfully predicted, "After me, the deluge."

The Price of Neglect.

During the last 35 years the average length of life has been increased 11 years for men and 12 years for women. As a result of improved sanitation, higher living standards, labor-saving machinery and greater medical skill, the death rate for the country as a whole has been pushed down to 11 per 1,000 persons. The tragic side of this picture, so far as Washingtonians are concerned, is that the Capital City has benefited so little from the general improvement.

The national death rate dropped from 11.8 during the five years from 1920-25 to a low point of 10.7 in 1934, rising to 11 again last year. On the contrary, the District rate has risen during the same period from 13.94 to 14.29. To present the same disgraceful picture in another way, Washington's death rate last year was slightly greater than was the rate for the entire country 20 years ago.

It is clearly evident from Census Bureau figures that health in the Nation's Capital has been slipping backward while steady improvements have been made in other cities. Science has placed at the disposal of municipalities the means of preventing epidemics, controlling many diseases of childhood and in general improving the public health. But Washington has been unable to take full advantage of all these recognized aids to health, largely because of the meager budget approved each year for that purpose.

The record of inhuman neglect of afflicted children and adults that has been written in Washington during the last few years is one of the most serious indictments of the city's financial organization. No one in authority faced the menace of a rising death rate, resulting from emasculation of the Health Department, until the present Board of Commissioners chose Dr. Ruhland to struggle with that problem. Now the city faces a sharp increase in the outlay for health as the only alternative to continued wanton sacrifice of life.

Dr. Ruhland's program, calling for more than twice the appropriation for the current year, must be considered in the light of this gross neglect during the last decade. It would give the Health Department a fund equal to $1.88 per capita. Even that is still considerably below the minimum standard fixed by the American Public Health Association to meet normal needs. And our Health Department must not only cope with an aggravated health problem on a day to day basis; it must also try to supply some of the accumulated needs of previous years.

Widespread interest in this problem has already been aroused. Fortunately, the Commissioners are well aware of the emphatic demand for a new deal in health. Of course, they will be expected to examine Dr. Ruhland's requests critically. But if the actual story of unnecessary death and suffering is made clear to them, to the Budget Bureau and to Congress, the present disgraceful situation will soon be only a black chapter in the District's history.

Time Marches On!

Bewildered by rapid social changes in their own life, Americans pay scant attention to such changes in the existence of other nationals. Nevertheless, the alteration that is progressing throughout England becomes vivid, not to say poignant, with the news of the sale of Windlestone, in English County Durham.

That place was the ancestral home of the Edens, and they have played roles in American, as well as English, history. "Rattling" Sir Robert Eden was the last Crown Governor of Maryland. As head of Lord North's secret service, another Eden corrupted a Maryland captain who was bearing dispatches from Franklin in Paris to the Continental Congress in Philadelphia, and a third member of the family fell before Jackson's fire at New Orleans. Yet not even the position and power of modern Anthony Eden, British Foreign Secretary, could prevent the sale of Windlestone to an up-and-coming London firm of real estate operators—"for building purposes."

The ancient house is to be razed, where hung for so long the portraits of those six Calverts, Proprietors of Maryland, which now adorn the Enoch Pratt Free Library of Baltimore. The centuries-old oaks must make room for twentieth century dwellings. The pheasants and the partridges that were the private sport of hereditary owners will doubtless be driven into exile by the outnumbering chickens of humbler folk.

Little wonder that the aged chatelaine of the estate "shudders" at this prospect! She must look longingly at one of its few parcels excluded from the sale: "The Eden mausoleum," the Baltimore Sun assures its readers, "will be walled off and kept in the family." And yet how can even its eldest tenants find quiet in a tomb that has become a mere enclave in the midst of modernism? Lucky Sir Robert to sleep in relatively restful Annapolis, hard by the Naval Academy of a Nation which rose upon the ashes of a colonial regime whereof he was an ultimate representative!

A 7-month-old girl, who had never spoken before, all at once began talking in complete and intelligible sentences.—Press report. What did she want?

Private Pressure Groups.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial of August 25 on Landon's speech at Chautauqua you used the history of Washington's Red Rider to point the moral of Gov. Landon's speech. "It is a perfect example of what is always threatened when the control of local education is placed in the hands of those who have no responsibility to the local community."

But what about the 12 perfect examples of what happens when the control of local education is supposedly in the hands of those who have a responsibility to the local community? The teachers' loyalty oath laws passed by those other 12 legislatures vary in severity, but all are directed toward the same purpose. All are equally open to misinterpretation and misuse which may easily result in limitation of free speech in America.

These examples prove that even those who are responsible to their own community are subject either to their own mistaken good intentions or to pressure groups such as the American Legion, the D. A. R., the V. F. W. and their friend, William Hearst, who get this legislation passed for their own purposes. Who could be more responsible to his community than Congressman Fite, of the New York Legislature, who is also a member of the Vassar College faculty and still voted in favor of the teachers' loyalty oath?

In view of these facts, I think your statement would be even more effective if qualified. Gov. Landon's speech has a moral in the Red Rider. But what about the moral behind the hidden and, therefore, more dangerous control of local education exerted by Hearst and equally centralized, equally irresponsible powers?

Plea For Hardboiled Cops.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Another pedestrian wants to speak. "Plain Pedestrian" in the August 25 issue of The Post presented in a forceful and truthful letter the views of the walking public; and to his words I would add that pedestrians have fewer rights in Washington than any city I have ever lived in.

Motorists dash into filling stations across pavements without slackening speed and without a thought for persons walking there. They fairly zip out of alleys onto pavements and seem highly indignant if the poor fellow hoofing it along the sidewalk can't leap far and fast enough. Motorists here are in too great a hurry to even spare a split second to the person in the street. Fatal accidents here run high, too appallingly high, and invariably the man behind the wheel of the death-dealing machine, is exonerated!

It's time the police cracked down on the motorists in Washington. Fewer permits to drive should be issued. Left and right turns should be eliminated wherever possible; and turning around in the street should be absolutely and finally stopped.

Stiff jail sentences should be clapped on the driver of a death car regardless of whether he struck his victim under "unavoidable circumstances."

Nine-tenths of the motorists here beat the lights; and when they do come to a grudging pause, it is right across the passageway. Washington is full of drivers that ignore the red light entirely. I recommend greater and stricter vigilance on the part of the traffic force; and less politeness. We need some hardboiled traffic officers here who are not afraid of the motoring public, and can truly and actually safeguard that hapless person—the pedestrian.

LURIA.

Mr. Blanton's Defeat.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Blanton defeated by Garrett 2-1," cried the doughty headlines of The Post on Sunday morning. Seldom, if ever, am I accorded such buoyancy of spirit as was mine at the moment. In church I silently thanked Jehovah that from now on, perhaps, educational life on the banks of the Potomac may flow in normal and scientific channels.

No doubt Mr. Blanton would find the mesquite-studded plains of the Lone Star State a truly inspirational spot for future cogitation. We wish he would stay there.

PLEBEIAN.

Hitler And The Church.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial in the issue of August 25 on "Religion in Germany" comes upon the heels of two first-hand reports on the same subject given to the Washington people. Dr. Gray, of the American University, does not see Germany as does a pastor whose sermon is given in The Post of August 24. No wonder there is much confusion in trying to be just to all parties.

Hitler must be measured in comparison with Mussolini. The Italian dictator had, to begin with, a population 98 per cent Catholic. He made his "peace" with the Pope before undertaking the conquest of Ethiopia. Hence there was no protest from the head of the church against his invasion of that African country. The Italian government's sympathy is obviously with Fascist rebels who are undertaking to overthrow the present Spanish republic. The church to which Mussolini holds is sympathetic with his attitude to Spain.

Hitler, on the other hand, started with an overwhelming population of Protestants, a strong population of Catholics and a numerically weak but influentially strong Jewish population. The German dictator, himself a Bavarian Catholic, accustomed to think of the church as a monarchy in its government, and the state and church united as the ideal government for any people, faced antagonistic elements in every move to consolidate Germany under any form of church government.

When The Post speaks of "opposition to the church" on Hitler's part the phrase is susceptible of many meanings. His attempt to combine all so-called "Christian" elements under some one rule or organization, so as to make the state supreme, yet utilize religion as an adjunct to the state, created an impasse, which must eventually block his way unless he undertakes to deport Christians as he did Jews. But anyone who would judge Hitler's action aright must see that he is attempting to do with the church situation in Germany what Mussolini did for it in Italy. But the two countries are dissimilar in this as in other particulars. The land of Luther will stand to the death for freedom of conscience, and for the phrase that "every man must give an account of himself to God," with emphasis on the word "himself."

Catholicism contends for a united church under the Vicar of Christ, who is the Pope. Unless there is radical surrender on the part of one of these two Christian organizations, there can be no unifying of the German church as is the case in Italy. But it is not so much a case of "persecution" on Hitler's part as undertaking, in his want of insight, to do what is impossible to do with Germany's church situation. Germany is not Italy. Had not the Italian church yielded, no one doubts that Mussolini would have gone to lengths which would have put Hitler to shame.

The Fight Game.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Being one who was fortunate in not being a witness at the Sharkey-Louis fight but listening in to the ringside description, I wish to take sides with Strickland Gillilan for his fine leter of August 22. Ted Husing and the socker (meaning Mr. Coe) didn't get many bouquets for C. B. S. for their imaginary description of what was supposed to be a fight—not a fight but a sturt to put Louis again before the public who were beginning to forget the Brown Bomber.

Every one knows what happened, and what do they do but get old man Sharkey off the shelf, dust him off and put on the circus, and our two C. B. S. gentlemen tell us, "Boy, what a fight, what we missed, nothing like it." Why did Dempsey get old and why is the fight game such a big joke these days?

Obeying The Law.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems to me that high Government officials ought to be "above suspicion, like Caesar's wife" not only in law observance and obeying traffic and other officers, but even in their civilian life. They are our ideals or should be in law and order, and in their daily lives.

I have read of sudden, hasty Reno divorces, of railroad gate crashings and even of reckless, fast and drunken driving of autos by sons of those high in authority, and even of sons of the President and Cabinet Secretary Ickes, and even of the First Lady parking her car on an arterial highway in New England to chat with someone else in an auto.

Organizing For Peace.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "Peace By Petition," is excellent for its logic and soundness. The principle upon which the League of Nations is founded is as old as man's dream and need of peace. Today's need of peace and orderly procedure among nations is greater than ever before. Spread of knowledge, rapid communication and transportation, and international trade make the nations of the world not only geographically, but economically and socially more realistically interdependent than ever before.

Organized peace workers have been too long on the defensive and relied too much upon appeals to sentiment. Education is certainly essential, but an efficient international peace machinery is even more essential. The League of Nations with all its inadequacies and need of changes is the only going international peace machinery of today.

Why do not peace workers acknowledge this or, in refusal of acknowledgment, come forth with plans of an international machinery more effective than the League? Organized peace workers fail largely because of the very methods they employ and the limited goals they seek. They assume that telling a bad boy to be good will make him good, that written pleas will stop bullets.

These peace workers generally fail to face the fundamentals. They have paid little or no attention to such fundamentals as national sovereignty and its part in making war; capitalism as a cause of war; an efficient international court for settling disputes among nationals and nations; a standing international legislature or treaty-making body such as the present League of Nations; the futility of "settling" disputes by force of arms.

Mr. Lansbury, who resigned office from the British Labor Party rather than agree to the application of sanctions against Italy, held to a noble ideal. But, in truth, his adherence did not help save Ethiopia or stop Mussolini. Nor will such adherence to principle regardless of actual conditions help the peace realization of the present generation. This very gentleman, had he violated the criminal law of England, would have been brought before a court of law for trial. Where would the gentleman separate force and orderly procedure? The one gives no regard to interests other than its own; the other gives recognition and regard to an interest greater than its own private (or national) one.

In an ideal world sanctions would not exist, for there would be no need of them. Today sanctions represent an evolutionary step toward the accomplishment of peace and international order. That war might result from the application of sanctions is not to be unexpected, for the necessity of applying sanctions denotes the existence already of actual or probable war.

Self-interest of a government can be so easily perverted to cause or promote war; the balance-of-power system simply enlarges the arena of war; the next and practical step, in the absence of realistic outlawry of war, is to have the concerted efforts of all governments and peoples to stop an aggressor. If they find sanctions effective, which they should be, then a declaration of war is unnecessary and against the very principle they are upholding.

Union Station Disunion.

Postoffice, Thursday.

"ALWAYS," she brooded—a quiet, black-eyed woman of the middle years—"I feel the cold chill in the back when I go to this Union Station. Always even in the hot August.

"Let me tell you the reason.

"Now I speak English well. And I live in Washington. But then I spoke none of it—could read only a few words—and I still lived in St. Pierre de Miquelon. That was the first time ever I was here—just passing through to go back to my home, from visiting my sister at New Orleans where I had gone by boat: only my litle girl and I. She had 4 years old, my litle Jeanne.

"Well, the train came in here, and we had hunger, the little Jeanne and I, for we had been on it long time and no money to afford the car-restaurant. But I look at the timetable and understand the train waits 25 minutes. Even I ask the trainman about that, showing him my watch and making signs—ridiculous signs, I knew, but I cared nothing. He nods with much reassurance; he gives me the pat on the back. So I decide I shall search for a reasonable platform restaurant of which surely one must be.

"'Rest here,' I command the little Jeanne: 'just here in this car-seat. Mother goes to buy us a beautiful luncheon, like a picnic. Budge not, deary.'

"The little one promises bravely. But when, from outside the window, I stop and wave to her and smile, she watches me from round blue eyes half-frightened.

"Eh, well—I find no platform restaurant. Even, when I say the word 'restaurant,' men point upward. The train has entered the station in the cellar: I must go upstairs.

"I go. I come to the magnificent concourse, with many people, very many signs. At last I see the sign 'Restaurant.' Beyond it I find the room where one may buy food at a counter.

"But here, too, were many people—all in front of me. The wait was without end! When my turn does arrive, I foolishly point, among others things on the menu, to what was hard-boiled eggs—and it seems that one must attend until they are boiled!

"I did not comprehend this at the first, then consulted my watch anxiously. The waiter nods with reassurance, as the trainman had nodded. He points to a big clock on the wall. Just three minutes before the train will start, I seize my package, give what must be twice the necessary money, pause not at all for the change, run through the concourse and down to the cellar.

"The train waits; but, from the window where I expect to see my little girl's face glued to the glass, no round blue eyes are looking for me. Why has Jeanne stopped looking?

"I climb the high steps. I hurry to the fifth seat from the end—be sure I had counted cars and seats before leaving. Yet only a man and woman are there. In all the car there is no little girl at all! . . .

"Newcomers are busy arranging baggage in racks: they cannot concern themselves with a woman who does not know how to speak their language. Doubtless the little Jeanne—although she promised not to budge—has found the time too long, while those dreadful eggs are boiling, and has gone in search of me.

"I hurry toward the door of the car, fall over the big foot of somebody, drop my package of food, try to descend from the train—am detained forcibly just as the whistle hoots and the wheels begin to go around.

"Where IS my child? I must find a bell-rope. I can find none. I can find nothing except a loud voice in which to call 'Jeanne—JEANNE! I want my little Jeanne! . . .

"It is then that the door opens and the conductor enters: a new conductor, just come aboard. He is plump—smiling—50. But, oh, above all else, he answers my cries in something like my own language!

"'You are French?' he asks. 'I speak French,' he says. 'I learned French in the A. E. F. Are you looking for your child? A pretty, blue-eyed, French-speaking microbe of a child? But she is perfectly safe, madame—five cars ahead!'

"And he spoke truly. It was not the little Jeanne who had moved. It was that the train had changed the order of its cars during the wait in this Union Station.

* * *

"Never have I heard such bad French as that of the kind conductor. But never have I heard better!"

Fair Enough

A Jumble Of Trash.

I hope somebody is keeping a file of all the plans and monetary hallucinations which have seeped through the cracks in a thousand earnest skulls in the course of the long panic, because there, my friends, would be a priceless jumble of trash and a fascinating historical record of the great confusion in which the people of the United States found themselves 'way back in the 1930s.

A hundred years from now, or whenever the world finally does come out of the ether and the queer dreams of the present time, another generation, still doing business in the same old capitalistic way and passing money from hand to hand, will pore over the brittle leaves of the wishful book, pamphlets and charts and marvel that such things ever emanated from the mind of man.

There will be, of course, the Townsend plan, a sudden inspiration which struck an old horse-and-buggy physician when he looked out a window while shaving one morning and saw an old woman fumbling in a garbage can for a crust to eat. The Townsend plan was the one which would have saved the country by awarding $200 a month to everybody over 60 years, and attracted to the doctor's fold a great following of young and vigorous adherents who wished to retire on the pensions of their parents and their in-laws.

This was a flaw which the old physician had not foreseen and could not remedy, and his failure finally was due to the aroused resentment of the great body of orphans and half-orphans who bitterly rebelled at the burden of supporting, in the idle luxury, the full-grown sons and daughters of the pensioners.

Before it finally blew away the old doctor found himself in nominal charge of a huge and clamorous block of Americans, but his incapacity for politics made him victim to a gang of political kidnapers. They slipped a bag over the old gentleman's head and took him around the country to deliver naive orations and fumbling addresses, and ran his idea into a campaign issue the year Roosevelt, 2d, was re-elected President. They would have dropped him bodily but for the fact that the old gentleman, by a stroke of luck, had stenciled his name and personality all over his movement and could have put the law on them.

• • • •

Then there was Huey Long's share-the-wealth plan. Huey was a Louisiana Senator, a smart and cunning lawyer and the best rough-and-tumble faker that the era produced. Huey promised every family so much land, so much cash money and a minimum annual income, but the figures varied from time to time and he never did freeze them.

He wanted to be a dictator-President, and he might have made it, too, but he never had anything specific to offer labor, and his promises were strictly sucker-bait. The labor leaders were smart, tough men who didn't accept generalities.

After Huey's death there was a wild scuffle for his organization, but it turned out that his widow owned the copyright and patent and, as she was a domestic woman, without political knack or ambition, the thing just disappeared.

A priest named Coughlin came along, too, bawling and snorting about some group which he called the money changers.

You could hardly call his "ism" either a plan or even a delusion. It was shapeless and insubstantial, like noise, but hatred was the keynote, and he dug up much of his following among those who as members of the Ku Klux Klan had vilified and persecuted his own cloth not long before.

• • • •

One Senator called a conference, described as the congress of the money nuts, on Capitol Hill. An old man got up at this meeting and submitted the Martian Plan of Political Economy, derived from a study of the canals on the planet Mars. Another proposed that the Government give everybody $10,000 and pass a law to keep prices and wages down to their current level. Another fellow proposed that everybody be forced to spend all the money he had right away, for wages and goods, and thereafter spend each other's current income by the end of that month or forfeit the remainder.

In California, Upton Sinclair ran for Governor on a plan to barter services for goods, and almost made it, although a clerk living in a furnished room might have wound up with a cow, a second-hand steam boiler and a bass drum as his savings at the end of a year.

Compulsory spending was another idea, and a man named Cochrane came up with a plan for an diminish 4 per cent per year and vanish in a quarter of a century. People had been accustomed to dollars which got fatter, not thinner, with age. There was another dollar proposed which might have been called the firecracker dollar. This one had a 30-day fuse. The idea was to get rid of it quickly, thus stimulating trade. At the end of a month it blew up and wasn't a dollar any more, and the last man to hold it got burned.

We are storing up many headaches and debts for the future generation, and it seems no more than fair to hand down something which will give them a few laughs.

Underground Explosion Puzzles Tennesseeans

Four distinct underground explosions in the past three days have shattered limestone formations protruding from the ground near the home of P. J. Bullion. George Smith, who lives nearby, said that after each blast gas which "smelled like burning sulphur or gunpowder" issued from fissues in the rock.

'Cold Campaign'

Christians And Jews Being Forced Out Of German Life Despite Collapse Of Nazi Wing Of The Church.

Dr. Ewart Edmund Turner, former pastor of the American Church in Berlin, and now of Washington, has just returned from a tour of investigation throughout the Third Reich. He interviewed numerous Protestant and Catholic church officials and Jewish leaders, and presents his conclusions in a series of four articles, of which this is the second.

By Dr. Ewart Edmund Turner.

CHRISTIANS as well as Jews are facing a "cold campaign" in Germany. Christianity is not forbidden, but its leading ideas of grace, mercy and universal love are held up for ridicule. Its pastors are not banished or butchered as in Russia, but they are portrayed by powerful Nazis as unpatriotic and outdated.

An example of this campaign was seen at the 550th anniversary of Heidelberg University. The program of the celebration omitted mention of the official church service held in connection with the anniversary. The "Volksgemeinschaft," Heidelberg's Nazi newspaper, carried pictures of the deans of the various university faculties, but left out the dean of the theological faculty. The anti-Christian faction in the party attempted to carry this campaign into the Olympic games by preventing Christian services of worship there. Owing to the activity of British and American Y. M. C. A. leaders this opposition was overcome, and a surprisingly large attendance was seen at these worship services.

Protestant pastors join Catholic priests in declaring that their work increasingly faces an attitude by the party hostile to institutional Christianity. The Protestant youth situation is worse than with the Catholics. No Catholic or Protestant youth can be a member of the Hitler Youth if he is a member of a confessional young people's organization. This shows the campaign at a very dangerous angle, for unless a young man is a member of the Hitler Youth his chances of getting a job are very slim.

Another typical illustration of how Christianity is being forced out of the national life of Germany concerns the charitable work of the churches. On the one hand the Christian churches are accused of being otherworldly to the neglect of practical service to the people; on the other hand the invaluable institutions of Christian social service are being forbidden or greatly limited. In 1933 Christian social agencies were allowed eight days for the solicitation of funds; in 1936 this has been cut down to two days. Not only was the limit two days, but both Catholics and Protestants are forced a collect on the same two days, and in addition these two days are also the only ones allowed to the Red Cross. The Red Cross is limited to soliciting on the street and in shops; the churches are limited to house canvassing and to collections in front of their church buildings. This year the churches were forbidden to use the municipal house lists as heretofore.

Bavaria Edicts Viewed As Trial Balloons by Nazis.

A GLARING INSTANCE of the "cold campaign" is taking place in Bavaria at this writing. Protestant churches throughout Bavaria have been forbidden the use of their parish houses for gatherings of every sort. The theory seems to be that churches should limit their activities to worship services and for this purpose they require only the use of their sanctuaries. This astonishing action has been taken by the Bavarian Ministry of the Interior at the instigation of the radical Nazi district leader, Adolf Wagner. It has been promulgated without the knowledge of the more moderate Nazi commissioner of Bavaria, Gen. von Epp, who is known to be a devout Christian.

Evangelical authorities in Bavaria realize that this is a kind of trial balloon, and if the parish houses can be closed up in Bavaria the radical Nazis will proceed to other provinces in order. Hence the Lutheran pastors in Bavaria have been instructed to defy the edict and to continue their regular parish-house programs. Under the signature of the Lutheran Bishop of Bavaria, Dr. Meiser, a letter has gone out to all pastors of the province reminding them of their ordination oaths to "preach the Word of God at all times and in all places."

"Therefore we must continue the Bible hours, the free periods, the youth meetings, and our men's and women's work, as formerly," the episcopal letter declares. Bishop Meiser bases his action on Scripture and Christian tradition. "The church can and may not expect men to come to it, rather it must go to the people and preach to those who will listen . . . All of this work cannot take place in the church edifice, but must be carried on outside. The church would capitulate if it gave up the freedom of open presentation of God's Word and allowed others to dictate where the community of the Holy Spirit may be founded and cultivated."

This extreme action on the part of certain Bavarian Nazis is now before the Reich Ministry of the Interior in Berlin. It is said to be causing considerable concern in state circles. The situation is all the more complicated because the Reich Minister for Church Affairs, Dr. Hanns Kerrl, is ill and is on an extended leave of absence. The situation in Bavaria thus far is not as tense as one would expect. The pastors have kept this among themselves and have assembled their congregations in the parish houses as usual. Police have not interferred. This writer talked to one pastor in Nuremburg who had not read his mail and did not even know that the law existed.

'German-Christian' Wing Collapse Is Encouraging.

ONE ELEMENT of real encouragement in the Protestant situation is the almost complete collapse of the Nazi wing of the church known as the German-Christians. This is partly due to the ridiculous behavior of the so-called Reichsbishop, Ludwig Mueller. He proved so bungling that even his own comrades among the German-Christians refuse to associate with him. The entire control of the church has been taken from him, yet he refuses to resign and continues to sign himself as the Reichsbishop.

To cap the climax he has joined a fanatical group called the National Church, whose intention is to merge all Catholics and Protestants in one united body. This group numbers but 3,000 worthies and has no influence in Germany whatsoever. What little influence Mueller had with serious Christians was definitely ended when he published his famous "Germanization" of the Sermon on the Mount, revealing the dominant pagan conceptions which observers always knew he harbored.

This summer a decisive blow has been given to the Nazi church group. The state-appointed Reich church committee summoned six theologians to render an opinion on the doctrinal utterances of the Thuringian German-Christians, the most powerful group of Nazi Christians remaining in Germany. The six scholars were Profs. Althaus, Brunstaed, Bultmann, Elert, Gogarten and Schumann. Two years ago it would have been impossible for these men to have condemned German-Christian ideology unanimously; some of their number were active in defending the Nazi philosophy as basically Christian. Yet in July, 1936, these men unitedly declared as theological specialists that the German-Christians are wrong in attempting to merge Christian faith and Nazi political doctrine.

New Cult Is Connected With Nationalism Sentiment.

IT MUST NOT BE hastily supposed, however, that the German-Christian movement is not an abiding danger. In Saxony it has given up its original name and now appears as the "League for Decisive Lutheranism." But so long as nationalism remains the dominant mood in Europe the attempt will be made repeatedly to define Christianity in terms congenial to each nation's political aspirations.

Since the German-Christians have powerful connections with the Nazi party they can remain as forceful factors within the church organization. Right now in Berlin their political loyalty is being used to compel Berlin's two largest Protestant churches to add two leading German-Christians to their staff. Pastor Engelke is being forced on the Kaiser Wilhelm Memorial Church, where the famous oppositional pastor, Gerhard Jacobi, is also a pastor. The deposed Bishop Peter is being forced on the cathedral, where another brilliant oppositional preacher, Dompredigter Richter, is pastor.

The biggest sensation of the year was the presentation in July of a letter of admonition and protest to Chancellor Hitler prepared by members of the confessional church. This writer was in Berlin the day the letter was delivered to Hitler. A story which went around Berlin, probably untrue in fact but possibly true in interpretation, said that Schacht read the letter to Hitler, but that Hitler got up and left the room when it was only half finished.

The Protestant pastors affirmed their loyalty to Germany, but protested against the widespread deification of Hitler, the de-Christianization of the youth, concentration camps, anti-Semitism, state interference in church affairs, imprisonment of pastors, Rosenberg's pagan influence, the limited justice obtainable in law courts, and the abolition of the confessional schools. No. Christianity is not dead in the land of Luther.

Insuring the Crops.

("President Considers Crop Insurance."—News item.)

Insurance Agent—Good morning. Could I interest you in some insurance?

Farmer—No. I've got all I can carry, and, besides, I'm in pretty good shape.

Insurance Agent—How about your crops?

Farmer—I had that removed two years ago; haven't had any trouble since.

Insurance Agent — I'm talking about farm crops.

Farmer—Oh, those things!

• • • •

Insurance Agent—I've some very fine propositions here. Now, for example, this general farm crop policy . . .

Farmer—I've got everything pretty well insured.

Insurance Agent—How about your potatoes?

Farmer—I took out a potato policy last month.

Insurance Agent—Of course it's for you to decide whether they're amply covered, but a lot of things can happen to a potato.

Farmer—My potatoes are pretty healthy.

Insurance Agent—Yes, but you never can tell. I had a case only last week where a potato crop looked in the pink of condition on Thursday, and Saturday it took sick and kicked out in no time.

• • • •

Insurance Agent—I've got a new lettuce policy that's very good. It provides double indemnity in case of heart trouble.

Farmer—Heart trouble in lettuce?

Insurance Agent—Certainly. In the hearts of lettuce, so to speak.

Farmer—You'll be trying to sell me onion insurance next.

Insurance Agent—Why not? It's one of our strongest policies. How about a little accident insurance on your oat crop. Doubl indemnity in case of complete disability.

Observations.

Far from the crowd that celebrates,
In boisterous bowers,
There's a peace that falls at pasture gates
Through evening hours.

And remote from the heat and this humid hell
Of perspiring people,
There's a charm in th chime of a vesper bell

block of opposition to these policies. Pointing to the growing dependence of the United States on the world for its food and clothes, he says the Administration farm program, reciprocal trade treaties and dollar devaluation primarily are to blame.

Picking flaws in the Wallace argument that more imports are necessary to create dollar exchange, he charges that the Administration completely ignores the fact that foreigners had excess dollar credits for the two years, 1934-35, amounting to more than $2,800,000,000. He says foreigners used these credits to buy securities, rather than American goods.

Nature's Laws Forgotten.

Peek claims the Administration gave no consideration to the fact that "the laws of nature transcend the laws of men." He argues the Administration erroneously hoped to control production by controling the farmers individual initiative. As a result, he contends, foreign markets have been lost, foreign production increased, farm purchasing power reduced, and the farm crisis prolonged.

Those of the Peek school would take aggressive steps to check competitive agricultural and industrial imports. They would invoke tariffs, quotas, embargoes and other methods of giving the American farmer and worker the full benefit of the domestic market. They would "bargain" for trade on a bi-lateral basis. They do not believe in giving all "favored" nations the benefit of one trade agreement.

As the controversy goes on, the increase in foreign imports continues. The 1936 drought and domestic crop shortages bid fair to extend the tendency. In July United States export trade declined 4 per cent in value from the already low June level. Imports incressed about 2 per cent over the high of the previous month. A record of more than ten years has been broken by seven successive months of an unfavorable trade balance, amounting to $24,091,000.

As this tendency could be offset for the year in the succeeding five months, Secretary of Commerce Roper sees "little significance" in the seven months balance. He points out that nearly half of the heavy July increase came in commodities not produced "to any great extent" in this country," such as furs, whisky and other spirits, wood pulp and paper, nickel and tin.

Farm Imports Mount.

But farm and food imports in that period have continued to register gains. An analysis of the Department's figures shows that edible animals and animal products, including meats, butter, cheese and fish, amounted to $8,796,000 in July, against $4,966,000 in the same month a year ago. For the first seven months of 1936 they were worth $51,130,000, compared with $44,271,000 for the same period last year.

Imports of vegetable food products and beverages, including grains, fodders, vegetables, fruits, vegetable oils, whisky and spirits, have totaled $362,665,000 this year, against $348,483,000 a year ago. In the inedible group, 40,368,000 pounds of unmanufactured tobacco, worth $16,360,000, were imported in the seven months, compared with 35,178,000 pounds, valued at $14,093,000 a year ago.

July importations of wheat, induced probably by the drought, showed a marked rise, 5,483,000 bushels, against 1,508,000 bushels a year ago. For the seven months, wheat importations have totaled 25,289,000 bushels, compared with 13,687,000 in the same period last year.

Corn, worst hit of all grains by the drought, will not be fully reflected in trade figures until later this year, but both corn and wheat are now on an import basis. The Department of Agriculture has predicted Argentine corn will be brought in to supplement limited feed supplies to reduce the necessity for forced livestock liquidations in some areas. Already some shipments are being received on the West Coast. About 180,000 bushels of Argentine corn arrived at San Francisco last week, and shipments from Argentina destined for the United States totaled 2,256,000 bushels.

Cattlemen, exercised over plans to convert vast Western areas to grass that may stimulate cattle production, and forced sales because of feed shortages, have been faced with increasing cattle importations. The 1936 reduced-duty import quotas, covering 156,000 cattle and 52,000 calves, are nearly exhausted. From January 1 to August 8, 89.0 per cent of the cattle quota and 100 per cent of the calf quota were used up.

New Deal on Defensive.

Although figures on imports of nonquota cattle were not obtainable for July, total imports of all dutiable cattle for the six months ended January 30 totaled 279,000 head, an increase of 55,000 head over the same period last year.

A seven-month's breakdown of farm commodities imported was not available at the Commerce Department yesterday. Following are some others that have shown increases in the last six months:

Commodity 6 Months Ended June (pounds)	1935	1936
Meat products	58,006,000	80,229,000
Canned beef	38,493,000	50,405,000
Cheese	23,905,000	24,352,000
Dried and malted milk	1,464,000	14,531,000
Hides and skins	136,513,000	164,501,000
Potatoes	18,045,000	45,307,000
Turnips	41,385,000	58,884,000
Tomatoes	65,200,000	66,835,000
Vegetable oils and fats dollars)	$39,536,000	$50,482,000
Unmanufactured wool	81,655,000	128,309,000
Unmanufactured cotton	25,812,000	53,696,000

This import trend is placing the Administration increasingly on the defensive in its farm and tariff policies. Farm agitation for protection of home markets has been definitely on the upgrade for the last two years. It is likely to force a showdown when Congress returns, if not in the present campaign.

(The End.)

Developments Revive Fears Of Russo-Nippon-German War

(Do relationships between Russia, Germany and Japan threaten peace in eastern Europe and the Orient? Dewitt MacKenzie, veteran foreign correspondent for the Associated Press, explains in this article the current situation, its background and its potentialities.—Editor's note.)

By Dewitt MacKenzie,

Associated Press Staff Writer.

New York, Aug. 26.—Three developments have given rise to concern as to whether the frequently predicted Russo-Japanese-Germanic war is approaching:

The initial success of Admiral Horthy, Hungarian regent, in his efforts to create a strong anti-Soviet front of middle European nations, including Germany.

The report from Berlin that the German government has doubled compulsory military service to two years because of "Russian militarism."

The Russian charge that Germany and Japan are about to conclude an alliance and are riding for war.

Alliance Report Revived.

Admiral Horthy, en route for a hunting trip in the Austrian Alps, went quietly into Bavaria last weekend for a "secret" conference with Adolf Hitler, who has been working vigorously along similar lines and who recently renewed his attack on Russia because of Soviet activities in connection with the Spanish revolt.

The Nazi dictator is said to have given Horthy his support for a proposed tripartite parley among Germany, Austria and Hungary to plan an anti-Bolshevist drive. Moscow already has called Poland a potential enemy and an ally of Germany.

Only three weeks ago the Soviet press charged that Germany was trying to effect this very line-up with warlike intentions. The newspapers revived the report which has been circulating throughout Europe that there was an alliance between Germany and Japan for concerted action against Russia.

Whether such an alliance exists or is in prospect, it is obvious that Russia is sitting between the jaws of a powerful vice which might start squeezing at any time.

Both Russia and Japan long have been talking openly of the probability of war between them, and just as openly have been rushing military preparations to meet any eventuality. Each country is well set for trouble if it comes.

Karl Radek, the Russian writer who frequently reflects Soviet Government views, said the other day that the only question was when the war would break out.

Question Only of Time.

Germany has indicated two objectives if she should engage in a war on Russia: The elimination of what the Reich calls the communistic menace to Europe, and territorial expansion at the expense of Russia.

The Russian territory most often cited in Berlin is the rich Ukraine. Germans have been mentioning this freely as compensation to Poland for the return of the Polish corridor, Danzig, Memel and perhaps Upper Silesia.

Because of Poland's geographical position between Germany and Russia, her assistance would be vital to Hitler in the event of war. The Polish army, reconstructed and rearmed by the late Marshal Pilsudski, is held to be one of the crack fighting units of Europe.

Poland never has shown any great love for Germany, but Warsaw is much more afraid of Russia than the Reich.

Japanese Proceedings.

While the barricade of alliances is being erected on the western border of Russia, and while Hitler continues to shoot his barbed shafts at Moscow, the Japanese are proceeding vigorously with their anti-soviet crusade in the Far East.

A striking indication of the temper in the Orient was given Monday when Japan's army headquarters in Hsinking, Manchukuo, announced that nine alleged soviet citizens had been executed at Hilar and 28 others sentenced to prison on the charge of subversive activities.

Hilar nestles in a hotly-disputed boundary region—near the junction of the Japanese-sponsored state of Manchukuo, the Republic of Mongolia, which is under Soviet influence, and Siberia. There have been many hostile incidents in this region.

Russia has concentrated troops and the requisites of war on her eastern seaboard. She has created great air and submarine bases, and has perfected her comunications across Siberia.

Nippon has consolidated her position in Manchukuo and Northern China and has strengthened her forces on the mainland. She has been working overtime on her naval and air equipment.

Their Policies a Question.

The question of what attitude would be adopted by other European nations in the event of a Russo-Japanese-Germanic war is one which probably the heads of states themselves could not answer at this time.

Moscow has charged that there is a secret understanding between Germany and Italy. However that may be, the once open hostility between dictators Hitler and Mussolini has given way to an armistice which appears not to be lacking in friendliness.

France has her alliance with Russia, and the former's distrust of Germany has increased under the Hitler regime with its abrogation of treaties and such moves as the reoccupation of the Rhineland. Britain would do her best to stay out of the war, but admits that neutrality would be a near impossibility.

Japan would hesitate to embark on such a war without first having assured herself that both Britain and the United States would keep hands off, or at least would not enter the lists against her.

Swedish Co-Ops

"K. F." Organization Has Proven Effective Trust Buster; Differs From British Plan In Low Dividends.

By the United Press.

Stockholm.

MOST SUCCESSFUL "trust-busters" in Europe, perhaps the most successful in the world, are the Swedish co-operative societies massed together in "K. F."—Kooperativa Foerbundet—according to evidence assembled here in the archives of the movement.

So successful has "K. F." been in humbling not only domestic cartels and monopolies but also foreign ones, like the International Electric Bulb Cartel with headquarters in Geneva, that there is now very little agitation in Sweden for "anti-trust" legislation of the type prevailing in the United States.

About the only "anti-trust" suggestion occasionally made is that all cartels and monopolies should be compelled by law to register with the government the full texts of their agreements. The Swedish co-operatives themselves suggested this to the government in 1927, but their own aggressive technique has been so successful that it is now widely questioned whether the government could do any better.

In any case, this is the peculiar contribution which Sweden has made to the world-wide co-operative movement.

Swedish Co-Operatives Attract 30 Per Cent Of Nation.

CO-OPERATIVE MOVEMENT in Sweden now embraces 30 per cent of the families of the country, some 550,000 households, organized in 750 small societies which run 4,000 retail shops with a total annual turnover of 377,000,000 kronor ($94,800,000). This looks innocuous enough, especially when it is noted that about 90 per cent of this retail turnover consists of foodstuffs, and that the total of $94,000,000 is only about 10 per cent of the total retail turnover of the country.

And yet, although it does only 10 per cent of the country's retail business, the co-operative movement, by choosing its time carefully and massing its attack, has whipped the following "trusts," one after the other: Margarine Combine, 1909; Swedish Flour Mill Combine, 1922; Swedish Oatmeal Combine, 1922; Rubber Galoshes Combine, 1926; International Electric Lamp Trust, 1930; Superphosphate Combine, 1929-1930.

In addition, it has attacked successfully price understandings in such widely different fields as shoes, cash registers and scales.

By themselves the 750 little societies could never have done this. They were able to do it, and many other things besides, when they established in 1899 their own manufacturing and wholesaling co-operative now popularly known as "K. F." Before Kooperativa Foerbundet was established, the little retail societies had struggled along, the earliest since 1860, under conditions not greatly different from those of the ordinary small retail trader. They bought at wholesale, getting a trade discount, and sold to members at a shade above cost.

However, they made one brilliant discovery that the great British co-operative movement (which at first they sought closely to imitate) was wrong in one of its fundamental principles. The Swedish movement violated one of the solemn rules of the Rochdale movement and are unashamedly delighted with the result.

Swedes Found Flaw In System Of English.

THE BRITISH rule has always been that a co-operative society should sell to its members at the "prevailing price," accumulate the profits and then hand the profits back to the members in the form of dividends; part of the profits, of course, are intercepted and retained as reserves.

The Swedes have always contended that the British policy was stupid from the standpoint of public psychology. The British movement, by charging its members the prevailing retail price, admittedly built up huge reserves and its factories and plants now dot the British Isles just as its ships sail the seven seas. But the English movement made little appeal to the housewife who was forced to eke out her weekly budget and to "shop around" where she could buy the most cheaply. Thus, from the Swedish viewpoint, the co-operative movement in Great Britain has a far smaller membership than it should have, considering its existence of more than a century, and is politically weak, as evidenced by its inability to prevent hostile legislation.

Swedish policy has been to cut prices to such a point as would cover costs and provide for (a) the slow building up of reserves, and (b) an annual dividend to members of not more than 3 per cent.

Thus the Swedish movement appealed immediately to the housewife who found it, usually, the cheapest place in which to buy. She got immediately the benefits of membership.

That is why, in Swedish opinion, they have built up an enthusiastic membership embracing nearly one-third of the families in Sweden and why their weekly newspaper has the largest circulation of any Swedish magazine.

War Declared In 1908 By Retailers Of Sweden.

BUT THE SWEDISH policy of low prices and low dividends, when it got clarified in the early 1900s, alarmed the retail traders and in 1906 war broke out between the co-operatives and the retail traders. The latter had organized a defense association which went around to the manufacturers and persuaded a large number of them to discontinue their trade discounts to the co-operatives. This was a real blow to the latter, who found themselves barred by the margarine manufacturers, the soft soap manufacturers, the chocolate manufacturers and others from 1908 through 1910. Even some of the banks closed their doors to the "co-ops."

This was the beginning of the co-operative fight against the cartels. The co-operatives, through "K. F.," bought a small margarine factory and simultaneously started a boycott concentrated on the two largest private manufacturers, ignoring the others. The two big ones found their sales falling sharply while the other members flourished. This led to dissensions within the cartel and its dissolution. Years later the margarine cartel was renewed, but by that time the co-operatives had built a big factory with output sufficient to prevent margarine prices from ever again being pushed up.

Their fight against the flour mill combine was much the same in technique. By 1926 "K. F." had acquired an ominous sound and when in June the co-operatives announced that men's rubber "galoshes" were outrageously high in price, the "galoshes combine" hastily met and on July 30 slashed the price from 8½ kroner ($2.50 a pair) to 6½ kroner ($1.62 a pair). The co-operatives pushed ahead with their factory and the price has fallen gradually to around 3½ kroner—about 85 cents a pair.

In 1930 they started their own electric lamp factory at a time when prices for bulbs were 1.85 kroner. The International Cartel still sells bulbs in Sweden, but it has had to cut its price to .85 kroner while the co-operative price is .80.

The Swedish co-operatives work in close alliance with the producers in agriculture. One of their successful "anti-trust" fights was against the combine of superphosphate manufacturers; after "K. F." had broken up the price agreement on superphosphates, it turned its plant over to a farmers' co-operative, by whom it is now run.

District's Society Women To Aid Power Delegates

Committee Obtains Assistance of Those Who Know Foreign Languages to Act as Interpreters.

Prominent society women of Washington are being pressed into service to act as hostesses and interpreters for the 700 odd delegates from 52 countries who are coming to the Third World Power Conference which meets here September 7 through September 12.

Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, chairman of the women's entertainment committee, has obtained a secretary and already is at work planning balls and garden parties for delegates and their wives.

Young ladies who speak one or more foreign languages will be much in demand during the session of the conference. One who speaks Chinese already has been discovered. She is Mrs. Bernice Morris, of Washington. Another, who speaks 14 languages, already has been signed up to do her part.

Highlights of the conference's social program will be the reception and garden party at the White House, September 11, for which Mrs. Roosevelt will return from Hyde Park. The evening preceding, there will be a concert at the Pan American Union, and on September 8 delegates have been invited to go on a boat trip to Mount Vernon.

Probably the most unusual dinner attended by delegates at any conference here will be that to be held September 8 in Union Station. To accommodate the foreigners and the 2,500 American delegates to the meeting, the station will be turned over to them for the banquet. Mr. Boomer of the Waldorf Astoria will come to Washington with silver, china, linen and chefs.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss are opening the gardens of their estate, Dumbarton Oaks, on September 9 to receive the delegates. Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, will attend although, because of mourning for her brother, she will not head the receiving line, as she would otherwise.

A mammoth ball will be held at the Mayflower Hotel on the evening of September 10. Foreign delegates will wear their decorations and Cabinet ladies who are able to return to Washington for the event are expected to be in the receiving line.

Because many of the guests will be unattended Mrs. Dougherty has arranged for hostesses to introduce dancing partners to the guests. Among those who have been asked to act as hostesses are: Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mrs. Robert V. Fleming, Mrs. Richard Southgate, Miss Patten, Miss May Helm, Mrs. Emily Newel Blair, Mrs. Wilbur Carr, Mrs. Morris L. Cooke, Mrs. William P. Eno, Miss Margaret Merrill, Mrs. T. W. Norcross, Mrs. Henry B. Wilkins, Miss M. T. Waters, Miss Elena Calderon, Mrs. Dorothy Lee Ward, Mrs. Daniel Stapleton, Mrs. Benton McMillen, Mme. Ricardo Alfaro, Mme. Blanche Bimont, Mrs. Ollie James, Mrs. Effingham Townsend, Mrs. Mason Gulick, Mrs. Harry Baxter, Mrs. Alice Smoot, Mrs. Sol Bloom, Miss Virginia DeGraw, Mrs. Charles B. Drake, Mrs. Lawrence Benet, Mrs. Randolph Meade and Mrs. Frederick Coleman.

Nations represented will include: Algeria, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Bolivia, Brazil, Bulgaria, Canada, Chile, China, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, France, Germany, Great Britain, Greece, Guatemala, Honduras, Hungary, India, Irish Free State, Italy, Japan, Lithuania, Latvia, Luxembourg, Mexico, Netherlands, Dutch East Indies, Nicaragua, Norway, Peru, Poland, Puerto Rico, Rumania, Sweden, Switzerland, Union of South Africa, Uruguay, Russia, Venezuela, Yugoslavia.

Youthful Riders Show Saturday At Rust Estate

By Grace Brooks.

Youthful Washington riders, whose parents have summer homes in Loudoun County, will take an active part in the annual Rockbridge Horse and Pony Show Saturday, on the estate of Mr. D. N. Rust, jr., near Leesburg, Va. Miss Eleanor Rust, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rust, a leading member of the Junior Hunt, is secretary of the show. This event is managed entirely by young people. As in former years, horses and ponies must be ridden by persons under 18 years of age.

The Misses Patricia and Ruth Hurley and Mr. Wilson Hurley, children of former Secretary of War and Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, will enter their mounts and ride in the show.

Miss White to Ride.

Washingtonians who will ride include Miss Mary Alice White, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Stanley White; the Misses Cornelia and Jane Pickens, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Pickens; Miss Beverley Moffett, daughter of the late Admiral Moffett and Mrs. Moffett, and Miss Peggy Wilmer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Wilmer.

Young equestrians of Leesburg who will ride Saturday are the Misses Betty Lyon, of Purcellville; Betsy, Mary and Eleanor Rust, Betty Honicon; also Bob Lyon, David Rust 3d and Stanley Green, jr.

The show will begin at 2 p. m. Eight classes will be shown during the afternoon. They are pony saddle, for ponies 14.2 and under; ladies' hunters, touch and out, road hacks, pony jumping, handy hunters, beginners' class and pair hunters.

Rockbridge is one of Loudoun's show country places. Situated about half a mile from the Leesburg-Washington pike, the lovely gray stone house, built by the Rusts, overlooks meadow land with thick, green turf bordering on Goose Creek.

Here the show ring, complete in every detail, is located. Mr. Rust, who is vice president of the Loudoun Hunt and one of the large breeders of thoroughbreds, is keenly interested in this show and is always on hand to keep a careful watch over the riders.

Society people from that section and from Washington are expected to attend.

Dinner Compliment To Mrs. Grannis

Cantwells Hosts to Wife of Navy Officer.

Mrs. Lawrence Grannis, wife of Commander Grannis, who is visiting friends in Washington, her former home, was guest of honor at a dinner given last night at the Shoreham by Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Cantwell, and will be complimented at a dinner being given there tonight by Mr. and Mrs. Foster Wood.

Mrs. Grannis expects to leave next Tuesday for Portland, Me., to join Commander Grannis, who is stationed on the U. S. S. Astoria, now off Maine. Later she will go to Norfolk, where the Astoria will be for three months while in the process of overhauling. Mrs. Grannis, the former Evelyn Pierce Varner, met Lieut. Comdr. Grannis eight years ago when he was at the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis for a post-graduate course.

Daughter Is Born To Mrs. Phillips

Will Be Named After Maternal Grandmother.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Phillips announce the birth of a daughter on August 20 in Wilmington, N. C. The child will be named Claire Rylander Renwick Phillips after her maternal grandmother.

Mrs. Phillips was Miss Natalie Keeney before her marriage last year. She is a niece of Mrs. Campbell Prichett and a grandniece of Mrs. Sydney Cloman, with whom she made her home here. Mrs. Prichett, who has been with her niece in Wilmington for several weeks, has returned to Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Phillips will make their home in Washington next year.

Polish Diplomat Leaves Sept. 9 for Native Land

The Charge d'Affaires of Poland and Mme. Sokolowska expect to leave Washington September 5 for New York, preparatory to sailing September 9 aboard the Batory for Poland.

Tonight Mrs. John Allan Dougherty will give a dinner in their honor at the Army-Navy Country Club. They expect to pass Sunday in Bluemont as the guests of Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom. A party also is to be given in their honor by members of the Polish colony.

Burnett Turners Hosts At Party for Bachelors

Couple, Formerly of New York, Also Invites Several of Capital's Spinsters to Meet 'Extra Men' at Informal Supper at Apartment Here.

By Dudley Harmon.

Bachelors—summer, perennial and otherwise—were guests of honor at an informal supper party given last night by Mr. and Mrs. Burnett Turner. This young couple, who came to Washington from New York with the New Deal, also invited several of the more attractive Washington spinsters to meet the "extra men."

The Turners live in the Meridian Court Apartments, originally built by Maj. George Oakley Totten as studios for artists. However, it seems that artists are rather scarce in this neighborhood, and the majority of apartments are occupied by diplomats and New Dealers. Baron Paul Schell, who is now in Europe, is among members of the Diplomatic Corps who have rooms in this same building.

Mr. Turner, formerly an architect with Alfred Hopkinson and associates, in New York, is now with the housing division of the Public Works Administration. Several of his colleagues were present last night, including Mr. Phillip Bourne, who will leave tomorrow for Gloucester, Mass., to join Mrs. Bourne until after Labor Day.

Among other New Dealers present was Mr. John Elting, of the publicity staff of the Department of Commerce. He is a brother of Mr. Winston Elting, of Chicago, well known in Washington when he was with the PWA housing division. He recently completed a book on his work here, which will be published soon.

The apartment of Mr. Frank Didisheim, which adjoins that of the Turners, was opened for the occasion, and guests danced in the large living room.

The hostess wore a blue taffeta gown with a white organdy chrysanthemum at the neck.

Among the guests were Mr. Schuyler Livingston, Miss Elizabeth Morrison, Miss Mary Cowles, in a blue and white print frock; Mr. Michal Budny, attache of the Polish Embassy; Mrs. Evatt Barnum, who wore a long black gown with white ruching; Mr. Barlow Henderson, Mrs. Patterson Roberts, Miss Josephine Rice, in a green chiffon gown with ruffles; Miss Katherine Fechet, Mr. Simon Whitney, Miss Betty Hardie, in Nile green chiffon; Lieut. Edward Pearce, Miss Eleanor Powell, Mme. Per Wijkman, wife of the Commercial Counselor of the Swedish Embassy, who is in Mexico as charge d'affaires for three months; Miss Elinor Fahey, daughter of the chairman of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, and Mrs. Fahey; Miss Olivia Fountain, who is an architect in the housing division of the PWA. Miss Rachel Campbell, who wore a blue print; Miss Helen Brereton and Mr. Knight Aulsbrook.

Miss Batch Wed To F. J. Farrell

Ceremony Takes Place in St. Anthony's Church Here.

Miss Agnes Frances Batch, daughter of Mrs. Catherine Elizabeth Batch, was married at 9 o'clock yesterday morning to Mr. Francis John Farrell, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Farrell. The ceremony took place in St. Anthony's Catholic Church, the Rev. Andrew H. Mihm officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Charles Batch, wore a gown of white mousseline de soie and a white hat of horsehair net. She carried a bouquet of Johann Hill roses.

Mrs. Catherine Crack, the bride's sister, was matron of honor. She wore a gown of yellow chiffon and a hat of yellow maline and crepe.

Mr. Joseph J. Farrell, the bridegroom's brother, was best man. The ushers were Mr. Ralph Wallace Batch and Mr. Benjamin R. Freeman, of Saratoga, N. Y.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Girl of 18 Threatens to Go to Pieces Because Her Beau of Four Months Is Leaving for His Home.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I need your advice more than anything in the world and hope you will help me to the best of your ability. At the present I am a nervous wreck and just don't know what to do. I am 18 years old and deeply in love with a boy of 21. I have been going with him for four months. This boy is everything a girl could want. I can say truthfully that he can be trusted. He has never been out with any other girl since we started going together. I have sent him away several times, but he always comes back. Wherever I go, whatever I do, he usually follows in my footsteps. He always wants to be near me, and never seems to tire of my company.

• • • •

This is my problem, which I don't understand: At first he told me he was in love with me. Since then I have had some dates with other boys, and now he says he just likes me a lot. But his actions would seem to prove that he cares for me even more than he did at first. He comes to see me every night now, whereas he came only three nights a week before.

Last week he told me he is going back to his home town to stay. I just can't let him go, and yet I can't bring myself to beg him to stay. He will be leaving for good in September.

• • • •

Tell me this: How can a boy leave a girl for good when he loves her so much that he always wants to be with her, can't stay away from her longer than four days at most, and cries when she says she is through with him. He really is going away and I can't do anything about it except worry myself into a wreck. How can a boy be so cruel? Thank goodness I haven't let him know that I am so much in love with him. Please help me. I don't believe I can stand it.

Get More Sleep.

DEAR ANXIOUS: The pangs of anticipated parting are usually a great deal harder to bear than the actuality of separation, once it has come to pass. You may think now that you cannot live after this boy has gone, but I assure you that you will. You may suffer keenly the first few weeks after he has gone, but within a month you will have lived through the worst of your sorrow and find yourself taking a more balanced interest in your other friends once more.

• • • •

I am sure I don't know why he is going back to his home town to stay. Perhaps his going has nothing to do with his feeling for you. Maybe he has no choice but to go, regardless of how he feels about going. You haven't said anything about his occupation or his source of income, which may have everything to do with his decision to go home. Or perhaps his announcement is pure fiction, made in order to test the quality of your feeling for him. Perhaps he wishes to see if the hard surface of your seeming indifference and self sufficiency can be cracked under threat of permanent separation.

Whatever his reasons are, my advice to you is to keep your chin up and your feelings to yourself. If you have managed to keep your love of him a secret up to now, your best strategy is to continue to keep him guessing to the end. Both of you are being rather unnecessarily emotional about a summer romance, it seems to me. My advice to all women is to beware of the man who freely sheds tears when his heart is impaled on Cupid's dart. He is apt to be as unstable emotionally as he is dramatic. Such tears spring from weakness and self pity.

If you are on the verge of becoming a nervous wreck, it is probably because you haven't been getting enough sleep, what with the boy calling on you every night in the week. Try getting 10 hours' sleep four nights out of seven for the next two weeks, and I am sure you will be better prepared to survive the crisis of the boy's final farewell, providing he keeps his word and goes. M. H.

Should They Kiss?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The wife is 42, the husband 50. They have been happily married for 20 years. For the past year the wife, in order to settle an estate, has had to see their lawyer, aged 68 (unmarried and highly respected) every month or two. For six months past the lawyer has kissed the wife good-bye. Not wishing to appear prudish or evil minded, she has exchanged a kiss, for he is a family friend whom she has known since the age of 10. For three months past, the lawyer has kissed her good-by two and three times, fervently, but not suggestively. The wife is pretty, has a good figure, and to the casual observer might appear to be somewhat "sexy" in type. In reality, she is a good, pure woman; a good mother and a faithful wife. For fear of causing ill feeling when important business must be attended to, the wife has not discussed the situation with her husband. What should she do?

CONFIDANTE.

DEAR CONFIDANTE: The wife should put an immediate end to the kissing. The lawyer may be highly respected, but he is acting like a senile old fool, and in tolerating his two or three fervent salutes at the conclusion of each business conference, the wife is placing herself in the position of tacitly inviting more suggestive advances. And she will probably be the recipient of such advances if the kissing game is permitted to gain momentum.

• • • •

I suggest she substitute a hearty handshake for the good-bye kiss. She can take his hand in both of hers, if she feels she must for old friendship's sake, but she should skillfully hold him at arm's length. It might be a good idea when settling down for a conference, for her to choose a chair which permits of a speedy unimpeded getaway. Then, when her business is finished, she can rise swiftly, cross to the door and with one hand on the doorknob, launch her farewells. This may be a little awkward for both at first—in view of what has gone before—but is infinitely to be preferred to continuing an exchange of kisses. A hint of this kind should be sufficient. If it isn't, the wife had better ask her husband's advice. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Improve Your Conversation

WHEN THE SHY young man can't think of a word to say, and when your own tongue freezes—did you ever notice what a help the family pet can be?

A pair of silly pups, or even solemn old Rover, or Rip Van Winkle, the cat, are marvelous ice-breakers. Their funny ways get tongues loosened. Bashful Bob begins to tell you of a pet dog he used to have and of the fancy house he built for it.

That was the start of his interest in the building industry, he declares. Soon he's talking of his own interests, and nobody is slow to talk about himself.

Beware how you do it yourself, though. Don't be one of those broken phonograph records that run on and on, "I was shopping today and I had the worst luck, couldn't match the shade of my dress at all, and on the way home the trolley broke down and I thought it would be there forever . . ."

Talk of everyday matters, but interestingly: "I went shopping today and when I passed the old Atwood house I saw gypsies living in it! They had a green parrot on the porch rail squawking 'Tell ya fortune.'"

Table Setting Advice Offered By Post Expert

Little Variation Shown in Formal Custom of Nations.

By Margaret Wallace.

IN WASHINGTON, where the personnel of the important hostess group is culled from every nation in the world, it is surprising how little variation there is from the accepted form of setting the table for a formal dinner.

The clever hostess never injects innovations in arrangement of plates and silver on her formal dinner table, whether she be the wife of a diplomat, an official, a hostess of a large mansion or a modest house or apartment. There are few rules that can be broken in this respect for even a small informal or family dinner.

The rule of spoons and knives at the right of the service place and all forks, but the oyster fork at the left of service plate, never varies.

All silver is placed in the order in which it is to be used. The spoon should be placed outside and to the right of the fruit cup or soup.

If oysters or claims are to be served, the oyster fork is placed first. The knife and fork for the main course follow, the large knife at right, and the large fork at left. The salad fork is placed next at the left nearest to the plate. More silver may be needed, but the discriminating hostess does not have a confusing array of knives, forks and spoons at the beginning of the dinner. It is more convenient to bring dessert silver with the dessert. Spoons for demitasse are brought with the coffee whether it is served at the table or in the drawing room.

The sharp edges of the knife always should be turned toward the plate and should be at least an inch from its edge.

Water glasses should be placed just above the tip of the knife. If bread and butter plates are used—and some hostesses do use them for formal dinners—they should be placed just above the forks. The butter knife is always placed on the bread and butter plate. It should be across the plate with the handle to the right.

If wine is served, the wine glass is placed at the right of the water glass.

The table napkin is placed in the center of the service place unless the fruit cocktail, oysters or similar first courses are in place when dinner is announced. Otherwise it is placed at the left of the service place beyond the silver.

Query—At a recent dinner at a foreign legation I was surprised when tiny colored-handled knives and forks were placed with the dessert course. There were dessert spoons, too. Ice cream and little cakes were served and fruit was passed afterward. As everyone took grapes of course there was no use for the tiny knife and fork. We use dessert knives, of course, but what do you do with the forks.

Answer—The use of fruit knives and forks is a continental custom and since many people have brought these attractive sets back from Europe recently, they are being used more and more on Washington dinner tables. The French make quite an art of using the knives and forks for some fruits.

Query—Is it necessary to have place cards at a dinner of eight? Is it correct or incorrect to have them?

MENUS for TODAY

BREAKFAST.
Bran flakes with sliced peaches and cream
Shirerd eggs Bacon curls
Buttered whole wheat toast
Coffee Milk (for children)

LUNCHEON.
Cream of green pea soup with croutons
Sardine and tomato salad with cole slaw
Rye bread Butter
Applesauce Sugar wafers
Milk

DINNER.
Spanish steak
Steamed rice
Creamed spinach with hard-cooked egg garnish
Bread Butter
Chilled cantaloupe
Hot or iced tea Milk (for children)

SPANISH STEAK.
1 flank steak
3 tablespoons flour
2 teaspoons salt
3 tablespoons lard
½ teaspoon pepper
1 green pepper
2 onions
1 bay leaf
2 cups canned tomatoes
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Have the steak scored on both sides. Dredge heavily with flour and brown well on both sides in the hot lard. Add salt and pepper and cover with the sliced onions, slices of green pepper and the bay leaf. Add tomatoes and sauce. Cover closely and let cook over a very low flame or in a low oven until tender (about 1½ hours).

Economist Gives Thrifty Ideas For Keeping Grocery Bills Down

Ann Sullivan Hagen Declares Housewife by Clever Management Can Still Work Wonders With $10 a Week for Her Foodstuffs.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

KEEPING a family well-fed while balancing a frail food budget is a challenge to any housewife in these days of soaring prices. But despite the odds, a clever manager can still work wonders with $10 a week, while an impractical one fails to provide appetizing, nourishing meals on twice that amount. So believes Ann Sullivan Hagen, home economist for a local dairy, who has conducted an adult education program along this line for the last year and is now planning a series of lecture-luncheons for Washington women groups this fall.

Yesterday she talked before the Wednesday Woman's Club of the Y. W. C. A. on "Budget Trimming Tricks." In an interview earlier she explained more fully how to make each dollar do double duty in the food budget.

"Proper apportionment of your food money and careful planning will do the trick," she said. "A knowledge of nutrition, seasonal drops in prices and current market values is extremely important."

The ideal division of the food budget she gave as follows: One-fifth for fruit and vegetables; one-fifth for meats, eggs and fish; one-fifth for bread and cereals; slightly less than one-fifth for fats, sugars and miscellaneous items; slightly more than one-fifth for milk and milk products.

"The homemaker who watches her budget carefully must be particularly careful in selecting and preparing meats," said Mrs. Hagen. "The less expensive cuts—flank, neck, chuck—are just as nutritious and can be just as palatable as the more costly cuts."

Mentioning that in many households, milk is the "budget stepchild," because it gets less than its share of attention, Mrs. Hagen stressed that "milk is the cheapest and best all-around food. There is no waste in a bottle of milk. It should have an important place in every day's menu-making, for it can be used for soups, creamed vegetables and desserts, as well as a beverage."

She said that the housewife who has never mastered the art of creaming vegetables has overlooked one of the most important budget helps, "because this is an excellent way to use left-over vegetables and to make dried ones (that have been soaked over night and cooked in salt water) more palatable."

Other suggestions Mrs. Hagen offered for the housewife bent on making food-budget dollars go farther are as follows:

1. Do your own planning and buying. Don't leave this to your cook or maid. No one is as interested as you are in curbing your grocery bill.

2. Plan meals a week ahead, bearing in mind that menus can be changed when there are left-overs.

3. Buy foods in season and in bulk if you live where foodstuffs can be stored without spoiling. Going to the grocery store each day is a waste of time. Staples can be bought twice a week; meat, every other day.

4. Keep posted on meat prices. Don't depend too much on your butcher's advice as to cuts to buy—any more than you would depend on a sales girl to choose a dress for you.

5. Keep an emergency food shelf stocked, so that unexpected guests can be taken care of without running the food bill out of bounds. Have on your emergency shelf, always, a can of peas, tomatoes, corn, beans, pineapple, pears and peaches. Any ordinary meal can be "dressed up" for company by using these.)

6. Learn how to prepare left-overs so they will be appetizing for a second, or even third, meal.

7. If you grow your own vegetables or fruit, home canning helps to stretch the food budget.

8. Include fish in your menu at least once a week. It is generally cheaper than meat and adds variety to your meals.

Heels and Toes Are Guide to Smart Footwear

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

HEELS and toes are the guide posts to smart foot grooming this season. Shoe designers have performed all kinds of tricks to make feminine feet appear small, chic and smart for fall and winter. A clever curve here, an unusual angle there, "dressmaker" touches to harmonize with frocks, effective materials in unique contrasts—these are some of the vagaries of the shoe fashion scene.

Round toes, which made their dramatic appearance several seasons ago, have become a staple in shoe designing. However, a lot of women who have been in the habit of wearing long, pointed lasts have felt that they were sadly neglected. Designers have finally come to their rescue by creating round toes with slenderizing lines. These combine comfort, smartness and an entire new silhouette for the foot.

If you think that square toes have a formidable look, your worries are over. The latest shoes in this classification have a new slant! A toe may start out to be the conventional square contour and then surprisingly fall into a slanting line across the front, giving the effect of a bias-cut. For an illusion of petite feet, this new idea is especially a boon to the woman who hesitates to broadcast her shoe size.

Black, leading the color parade in both New York and Paris, infers that black shoes will be fashion's first choice in footwear. Black patent leather to complement satins for the first fall ensemble; black suede (many of them patent-trimmed) to accompany costumes of practically any and all materials; are outstanding fall shoes noted. For spectator sports wear color is introduced, and many smart models make use of two tones, repeating the color theme of the costume.

The slanted-toe and angled-heel step-in is the latest mode in popular square-toed footwear. It molds itself to the natural contours of the foot. Designed of suede for general daytime wear.

Named for Stars.

Paris (AP).—Gathered bodices with long sleeves and full skirts characterize Lanvin's horoscope dresses, embroidered with celestial designs for good luck and named for the stars.

Wool Frocks Shown In Muffler Twills

New York (AP).—Wool frocks, designed as first fall street outfits to be worn without wraps, are shown in shoals here. They come in new muffler twills, like the fabric used for men's mufflers, cashmeres, plain and nubby wools in such colors as grays—running from deep oxford to steel; greens both vivid and dark spruce, rusts, beiges, browns and mixtures. Many of them button down the front from neckline to hem. Pockets—sometimes four to a dress—are occasionally seen on this type of frock, one of the most novel designs being football pockets shaped like the gridiron pigskin and stitched to increase the resemblance.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By
Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

A Bone Destroying Tumor.

About 30 years ago what was at first thought to be a new disease appeared in some of our Southern States. It was found chiefly among those living in insanitary surroundings—and the inmates of institutions and asylums. The symptoms manifested themselves during the summer, increasing in severity until late in August or September. Pellagra has long been prevalent in Italy, Rumania, Egypt and in many parts of southern Europe. It is caused by a food deficiency and its seriousness will vary depending upon whether the food lack is great or small.

There are four parts of the body affected chiefly—the skin, the digestive tract, the nervous system and the mind. The skin lesions at first simulate sunburn. Later, as the inflammation subsides, they become definitely pigmented, darker in shade, and quite noticeable in contrast with lighter adjacent areas. A collarlike, dusky band is frequently seen about the neck and similar bands occur around the wrists. Later there may be crusting, scaling or the formation of fissures.

The digestive disturbances may be traced along the entire length of the alimentary tract—from the mouth to the stomach, and finally to the large bowel (the colon). Soreness of the mouth may be extreme and the tongue and mucous membrane surfaces show extensive ulcerations.

Nervous symptoms include tingling, numbness and loss of sensation. As the disease advances, tremors, weakness and cramps may develop. Sometimes there is considerable wasting (atrophy) of the muscles due to nerve damage.

On the mental side most of these patients are quite irritable and may manifest anxiety and at times excitement. If the situation is not recognized and the proper food supplied they may become dull and apathetic with impaired memories. In late stages melancholia and maniacal tendencies are present.

The particular lacking vitamin is B2 and the most available source is yeast. This is the cheapest and best remedy. If administered in sufficient amounts appetite is increased within a short period. More than 50 per cent of the patients will complain that the tongue and mouth are so sore that it is impossible to chew or swallow food. Nevertheless, regardless of local distress, the administration of yeast must be begun and mouth washes used daily to allay irritation. Ulcers will heal and the digestive symptoms will be relieved. This is the effect in favorable cases.

Diarrhea is often so pronounced that strong methods may be required to check the advancing weakness from this source. Absolute rest in bed is indicated with the best possible nursing care.

Boy Entitled To Handle Pay For Own Work

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

BILL needed money. His allowance was inadequate for the needs of a 10-year-old boy, and yet the family purse could not carry a heavier load. He knew that, and so immediately set about finding some outside source of income.

His first job, cutting a neighbor's lawn, netted him 50 cents. He had an immediate use for the money. Unfortunately, in the first flush of pride and excitement, he showed the money to his mother. It was the last he saw of it. She took it and banked it for him at once.

"You must learn what thrift means," was the reason she gave her son.

The next time Bill earned money he did not tell is mother. She lost, by this one ill-considered act, much of Bill's trust and confidence which she never regained.

That money belonged to Bill, and though his mother put it into a bank in his name, she definitely misappropriated funds when she took it away from him. Such training does not promote thrift. If anything, it discourages it. Bill was sore and resentful. His plans were upset, his prospects ruined. He felt cheated, robbed by his mother.

Parents are apt to forget that a child is not their property nor yet a part of themselves, to manage and treat as they like. If a child is not allowed to have property and to manage it as he thinks best, he is no better than a slave! A child learns thrift gradually from its own experience and from the example of those about him. Sometimes the lesson is severe, but he must be permitted to go through with it.

Sheridan Road

By Helen Topping Miller

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT.

The Hotel Meeting.

She was a girl in a nightmare, Eden Faraday told herself. This was all a fantastic play she was watching. A yellow haired girl with no make-up, her face white, her hair straggling under a dollar hat, riding through shabby blocks, rehearsing over and over the part she was to play.

It was all a wild dream. The sinister looking small hotel where she got out of the car, remembering that she was Gracie Lincoln. She was to ask for a key and go up to a room, turn on the lights, sit on the bed, and wait.

Somehow, by devious ways, Gran would be smuggled in. "I'll do the best I can," Garnett said.

Eden remembered the bleak rainy afternoon in that somber house on Sheridan road, a tap at a high window—would Gran have to climb roofs and drop through skylights? She would not mind, Gran would love doing a thing like that.

The hard part was remembering not to be stonily aloof when the greasy faced man gave her the key.

He said, "Hello, Gracie," and she answered listlessly in Gracie's wan, breathy voice, "Hello, Conrad."

"How's Clint?" he asked.

"Tough," Conrad was consoling.

The place smelled of fried meat and cheap whisky. The elevator bumped and the boy with pimply skin who ran it said, "Eight' floor. Watch y'step."

She froze. The door knob was turning slowly. Terror raced over Eden. She gripped the side of the bed to keep from screaming.

He would come alone, Garnett had said. This man who was feared by a whole city. It was part of his terrible power that he went about alone.

He wore evening clothes and the whiteness of his scarf gave his face a curiously tawny glow. He looked at her steadily.

Eden said, barely in a whisper, "Hello, Ozzie."

Ozzie Zellner laid his black hat on a chair and closed the door.

"You weren't expecting me, were you?"

Garnett had posted her. Eden said, still tonelessly, "I sent for Monk. Burke is after me. He'll try to make me talk. I've got to get away."

"What about Clint?" Zellner asked.

She shook her head. "An hour or two—maybe," she said. Fear choked her—but that was well. She could not raise her eyes. His were so keen—so dry and searching.

"I hadn't heard that," he said.

Now came the difficult part. Her throat cramped. The words came with difficulty. "Clint talked, Ozzie, before he lapsed into unconsciousness." The man stiffened and his eyes narrowed. He licked his lips.

If he said the wrong thing—if he gave her no chance—the air was taut, her skin prickled. Where was Gran? Where was Jack Garnett? They had no right to leave her here alone with this man with the dead youth horrible in his eyes and old terrors and old hates making his lips move soundlessly.

But fortune was with her. He said, "And what could they get out of you? Nothing! What do you know? Nothing at all. Clint talked, did he? Full of hope and half dead. He raved a little—and now you'll talk, eh? What is this? A shakedown?"

She waited a startled breath. No one had told her what to reply to such a question. She could only go on with the lines she had learned.

She said evenly, "I swept out Clint's car, Ozzie, that next morning after Grappi. I don't blame you for getting Grappi—nobody blames you. But, you know Burke. And if they make me talk—I swept out the car. I found what you lost."

His eyes glittered. He said, "You aren't talking to anybody, Gracie. You aren't telling anybody that I was in that car. I'm the only friend you've got and you know it. But, any funny business and you'll get what I gave Grappi, understand? Be nice to me and I'll get you away tonight. What was it you found in Clint's cab?"

"This," said a cold, steady voice. A man stood in the bathroom door, a blue gun in his hand. A man with a lean, remorseless jaw. "Get 'em up, Ozzie!" he snapped.

Gran to the Rescue.

What happened then was too swift for Eden's terrified eyes to follow. She saw Ozzie Zellner's hands go up—slowly—too slowly. At his breast his thumbs twitched suddenly and there was a spurt of flame past her face and feathers whirled in the air as a shot tore through a pillow just beyond her head. From the bathroom door the detective's fire had knocked the pistol from Ozzie's hand, and then something small and furious and aflame was in the room and Ozzie Zellner gave one odd scream as something was hurled into his face. "You will—will you?" Gran's voice shrilled.

Zellner went down to his knees, clawing at his eyes, and choking.

"Scum!" scorned Gran, turning a small scarlet can in her hands, "tie him up, boys. I got him. Red peppers. It always works."

Eden never knew exactly what happened after that. She was aware of buttons pressing into her cheeks, of arms holding her, of a voice in her ear saying over and over, "My God, Eden, he might have shot you."

"He missed," she whispered, then lay back limply, glad to be held, glad to be carried, glad that it was dark—curiously, singingly dark.

Glad, O glad, that this was Jack who was holding her, sure and certain, as she sank down into the pleasant dark that she wanted to be held forever and forever!

She was at home in her mother's bed when the light came again.

"Such a hideous thing!" Eden heard her mother's voice, "I'll never forgive you, mother—never! To expose a girl to such danger—just to catch a cheap, common murderer——"

Eden lifted her head. "O, please," she cried in a little wail, "don't call him a cheap murderer. I caught him. I sat there and looked at him—he was frightful!"

Garnett was sitting on the side of the bed. He patted her hand pridefully.

"You caught the most dangerous criminal in Chicago, darling," he said. "You were darned clever about it."

"Gran did most of it—Gran and her red pepper. Where were you, Gran?"

"Outside the door with the elevator boy and hotel clerk and Jack here, waiting. We went up the fire escape and I lost the heel off my shoe. The hotel clerk had it all figured out——"

Odd Jobs for Burke.

"I went to school with him in Willamette," Garnett said. "They're all a little tired of Ozzie—all those boys. But they were afraid to do anything till I sold Burke the idea of pulling off this stunt. And we had to do it tonight because tomorrow Gracie and I were supposed to disappear—silently—I got a grapevine on that."

"From some one else who went to school with you in Willamette?" Eden asked, smiling.

"A lot of people went to school in Willamette."

Eden lifted herself suddenly on her elbow. "Tell me the truth, Jack Garnett," she said. "Did you ever take a picture with that old camera?"

He grinned. "Yes—I took one once. The day they buried Vick Lincoln. It came out pretty good."

"You're not a newspaperman at all?"

"Well, some people would probably tell you I'm not. I've been doing a little work for Martin Burke alone. Odd jobs." And he would tell her no more than that.

It was Burke himself who told her later of the work Jack Garnett had done.

"I've been using him for a year. The boy's clever. He's got something. But now he's no use to me any more. These crooks here know him. So I'm going to lend him to a friend of mine down in Los Angeles. They need a clever lad out there—what with nuts and Communists and other wild fry they've got on their hands. Do you think," Burke laid his stubby hands together and looked at her from under his shaggy brows, "that you'd like living in California?"

"I?" Eden felt the slow red burning up her throat. "What have I to do with it?"

"Well, if you don't like it—he ain't going to like it either," he said, "and I'd surely like to help out that friend out there."

"I might—like it." Eden smiled at the old man. "And—he might need me. I do very well, don't you think?"

"You do grand. And he'll need you all right—or I'm as blind as Flanigan's mule—the one that ate the broom."

"He hasn't asked, you know. What do I do about that?"

"Some boys," mused Martin Burke, "need coaxing and some need a jolt in the jaw. I needed one myself once. Nobody socked me—so my girl married a sailor. I've given this Jack lad a gentle poke. He's a proud devil—and there's the chap from Sheridan road—my fine assistant. What about him?"

Clint Out of Coma.

"I sent him away—as kindly as I could. I—couldn't marry Owen Field, Mr. Burke."

Gran was happy. With morning Clint came out of his coma. He was better. Gracie had color in her face as she kissed Gran good-by.

"You've been so splendid to us. We're going away—as soon as Clint is well again. A long way away, Mr. Burke is going to lend us some money."

Gran obeyed a swift impulse. She jerked the old brown pocketbook out of the drawer.

"Here's a little I've been saving," she said, taking out the crumpled bills. "You buy something for that baby. And you name him for Martin Burke."

Bridget Faraday was not happy. Bridget and Robin. Robin had come in the morning, small, excited circles blazing in her cheeks.

"Sidney Creighton and I are married," she announced. "And, please, family, don't get excited about it. Because it's done."

It was then that Gran began to laugh.

"Excitement is it? If ever this family gets excited by anything again, I'm thinking, the world will have to fall in on our heads!" Then she put an arm about her pale-faced daughter-in-law. "Cheer up, Bridget. It's not so bad when you give up struggling. You and I'll be old ladies together. I could use a little bit of peace, I'm thinking."

At night Garnett came again, in the muddy little car.

"I thought——" he hesitated, "you might want to see Gracie——"

Eden shook her head. "I'd like to see a moon," she said. "Martin Burke was here this morning. I want to hear about California."

Garnett's tired, absent eyes took on an ecstatic glow. He straightened and the boyish smile transformed his face.

"It's a grand country," he said, but—lonesome!"

Eden Faraday's eyes were blue flowers washed in silver rain.

"Do I have to throw myself at you, silly?" she asked huskily. "Do I have to beg you to kiss me——"

"O—my dear!" choked young Mr. Garnett—loosely attached to the newspaper profession.

Police Held Responsible For Gambling

Commissioner Seeks to Learn Why Officers Don't Aid Squad.

Precinct commanders and patrolmen on a beat will be held responsible in the future for gambling houses and other illegal enterprises uncovered in their districts, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen said yesterday. He disclosed that he had asked Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, for a report on a raid at 2512 L street northwest last week.

Earlier yesterday a special police raiding squad, led by Lieut. C. P. Cox, seized 30 patrons of a gaming establishment in the 1000 block of Ninth street northwest.

Commissioner Hazen asked Maj. Brown whether the Third Precinct had reported the gambling house prior to the raid.

"If not, why was this place not known or suspected by the precinct?" Hazen asked.

Cites Fire Escapes.

"Were there any violations of the building regulations or lack of any occupancy permit at the above location? If so, was the matter reported to the engineer department?"

Commissioner Hazen addressed another communication to Capt. Patrick H. Tansey, acting engineer commissioner, calling his attention to the police report that fire escapes were found barred along with "other apparent violations of the building regulations."

He asked whether the building inspector's office had any record of the violations and whether an occupancy permit had been issued for the premises.

"I want to find out why patrolmen don't report these places," Hazen said.

"Assistance Needed."

"You can't expect the vice squad to cover the whole city without assistance from the precincts."

Members of a special police raiding squad—who have battered their way into six reputed gaming places since last Friday—returned to the Ninth street building late yesterday, made wholesale arrests and confiscated a quantity of alleged gaming equipment. The place had previously been raided last Monday, but all occupants escaped through a rear door after setting the room afire.

Determined to break up Washington's thriving rackets and at the same time locate three reputed members of the Warring gang sought in connection with a recent gangland shooting, Lieut. Cox said he would continue to lead his men in daily raids "until every joint is smashed."

American Nations Accept Parley Bid

Acceptances for participation in the Third World Power Conference and Second Congress on Large Dams, meeting in Washington the week of September 7, have been received from 18 Central and South American countries, Director O. C. Merrill announced yesterday.

Nearly 100 delegates and members from these countries will come to the Capital City to discuss the world's power problems with representatives of more than 33 other nations.

Participation of Latin-American nations is heavier than at any other time, it was said, a special effort having been made to insure their attendance in line with the "good neighbor" policy of the United States Government.

Two members of the Brazilian delegation, first delegates to arrive, are in Washington. They are Senor Melgavio da Silva Rodrigues, assistant chief of irrigation, reforestation and colonization service, and Senor Antonio Jose de Souza, director of water service. Senor Joao Marques dos Reis, minister of communication and public works in Brazil, will arrive later. He will speak at a general meeting of the conference on "Power and the State."

As Woman's Party Honored Memory of Suffrage Leader

Women Honor Susan Anthony At District Fete

U. S. to Sell 75,000,000 Stamps in Memory of Suffragist.

Washingtonians joined with the Nation yesterday in honoring the memory of Susan B. Anthony, pioneer woman suffrage advocate, on the sixteenth anniversary of the signing of the nineteenth amendment.

Washington paid twofold tribute to the late suffragette. The Government placed on sale at the city postoffice the first of 75,000,000 stamps dedicated to the woman and the National Woman's Party gathered at a dinner last night to pledge themselves anew to equal rights.

Women from all over the Nation attended the dinner at the headquarters of the party. Among other guests were officials of the Postoffice Department and officers of women's organizations.

Speakers Listed.

Speakers included Mrs. Florence Hilles, of Delaware, national chairman of the Woman's Party, who presided at the dinner; Miss Doris Stevens, chairman of the Inter-American Commission of Women; Mrs. Robert Adamson, of New Jersey, chairman of the Susan B. Anthony committee; Mrs. Abby Scott Baker, of Washington, member of the committee; Mrs. Harvey Wiley, of Washington; Miss Anita Pollitzer, of South Carolina, vice chairman; Dr. Luther Evans, associate director of the historic records survey; Miss Mary Philbrook, of New Jersey, chairman of the archives committee of the National Woman's Party.

The new stamp, dedicated to Miss Anthony, who died 30 years ago, reproduces in profile her head and shoulders from a statue and bears the caption, "Suffrage for Women." It is violet in color.

First Purchases.

The first of the stamps were bought yesterday at the Benjamin Franklin Postoffice by a delegation of women, members of the National Woman's Party.

At the party last night Kate Tomlinson, Washington actress, came to the balcony of the house, in the garden of which the dinner was held. Miss Tomlinson was dressed as Miss Anthony. She gave a message composed of excerpts from Miss Anthony's speeches.

Mrs. Pistor's Death Is Held Accidental

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald yesterday issued a certificate of accidental death due to an overdose of a sleeping medicine in the death Monday night of Mrs. Katherine Pistor, 65, widow of Adolph T. Pistor, former chief of the meat inspection division of the Bureau of Animal Industry.

Mrs. Pistor was found unconscious at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Hilda Doyle, 2700 Connecticut avenue. She died several hours later in aGrfield Hospital. Dr. MacDonald issued the certificate after interviewing members of the family and a private physician.

Funeral services will be held at 9 a. m. today at the Church of St. Thomas the Apostle. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Ruth Bryan Owen Plans Stump Tour

New York, Aug. 26 (AP).—Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen Rhode, minister to Denmark, said today she would start out in a trailer September 1 on a two months' speaking tour for the re-election of President Roosevelt.

She will be accompanied by her husband, Capt. Boerge Rhode, a member of the Royal Life Guard in Denmark, who will act as chauffeur.

Mrs. Rhode said she expected to visit 13 States and to make two or three speeches a day, mostly in cities and towns under 30,000 population.

The States she will visit, she said, are New York, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Colorado, Wyoming, Nebraska, South Dakota, Minnesota, Ohio and Tennessee.

12 of 14 Beer Permits Rejected in Virginia

Southeast Plans Events Today in Anacostia Park

Citizens Arrange Field Day Program, With Baby Show a Feature.

With athletic events, a baby show, a band concert, a parade and a street dance as a finale, citizens of southeast Washington today will celebrate Greater Anacostia Field Day at Anacostia Park.

The program is sponsored by the citizens' associations of Congress Heights, Hillcrest, Randle Highlands, Washington Highlands, East Washington, and Anacostia and the Anacostia Lions Club and Business Men's Association. The first feature, a foot race for boys, begins at 10:30 a. m.

Races of various distances will occupy the time until 12:30 p. m., when a prize will be given the outstanding athlete of the day and a picnic lunch will be held in shady Anacostia Park.

The baby parade, open to youngsters up to 5 years old, starts at 2 p. m. Judges will be women reporters from Washington newspapers.

At 2:30 p. m. the novelty field events start. These include such features as a potato race, a three-legged race, an obstacle race, a shoe race, a wheelbarrow race and a turkey fight. Prizes will be given to the winners in each event.

A band concert is scheduled for 4:30 p. m. This will be followed by soft-ball games, tug-of-war contests and horseshoe pitching. After an intermission the evening program will take place on Minnesota avenue and Good Hope road.

The parade, the first feature, will follow this line of march: S street to Sixteenth, to W street, to Nichols avenue, to Good Hope road, to Minnesota avenue. Prizes will be given for the entries adjudged first and second best in each of the two divisions.

The last event on the program, the street dance, takes place at Minnesota avenue and Good Hope road at 8:30.

Socialist Nominee Talks At Rally Here Tonight

George Nelson, Socialist nominee for Vice President of the United States, who operates his own farm in Mill Town, Wis., without any help, will speak tonight at 1703 K street northwest on "Socialism and the American Farmer."

Vice President of the National Farm Association, he also is one of the national directors of the Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union. Joining the Socialist Party in 1899, he fought participation in the Spanish-American War. He has served three terms in the Wisconsin State Assembly and was Speaker of the House for one session.

Eighth Suspect Held in Holdup Of Dairy Here

Also Faces Questioning in Assault and Robbery in Tailor Shop.

A colored man, sought since the $1,500 holdup at Fairfax Farms Dairy several months ago, was arrested in Baltimore yesterday and returned here to face questioning with seven other members of a suspected robbery gang—including a prominent Washington attorney.

The suspect was arrested in a round-up of the reputed gang, which started several weeks ago. The lawyer was taken into custody last Sunday and held without charges. Two other alleged members of the gang named the attorney in statements.

Yesterday's prisoner, arrested in Balimore by Detective Sergt. Frank O. Brass, is believed to have engineered the $300 holdup and assault of Sam Siratonis, a tailor in the 3000 block of Fourteenth street northwest. Siratonis was struck on the head.

The lawyer has been grilled repeatedly, but steadfastly refuses to admit any part in the robberies. He was accused by others under arrest as "master mind."

The Baltimore suspect was captured after police questioned his mother and brother, both of whom are being held.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson refused to comment on the attorney's detention. He indicated, however, that the man would be formally charged within a few hours.

Bond Issue Asked By Sanitary Group

Baltimore, Aug. 26 (AP).—The Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, operating in the area around Washington, today asked the Public Service Commission for authority to issue $400,000 in bonds to finance water and sewer line extensions.

Of that amount, $55,838 will be spent in Prince Georges County and $162,650 in Montgomery. The rest of the money available has not been dedicated to any specific construction work.

Public Service Commission set September 29 for a hearing on the request. The bonds would mature in 30 years.

Part of the work to be done by the Sanitary Commission would be construction of a water main extension to Greenbelt, the Resettlement Administration's project near Berwyn. The cost of this, $101,500, would be repaid to the Sanitary Commission by the RA.

U.S. Control Of D. C. Court Fund Studied

Supreme and Appellate Tribunals Involved in Budget Plan.

Justice Officers Back Proposal, Indicating Adoption Likely.

Federal authorities are considering transfer of District Supreme Court and Appeals Court maintenance expenses from the District government to the Justice Department, it was disclosed yesterday.

While officials involved, both at the Justice Department and at the courthouse, were out of the city yesterday, it was understood final decision is up to Daniel W. Bell, acting budget director, subject to approval by Congress.

The transfer would effect a saving of almost $500,000 a year, or $470,000 for the next fiscal year, to the District government. District officials, however, have taken no part in the negotiations between the courts and the Justice Department.

Authority over fiscal estimates is the only power the Commissioners exercise over the higher courts; otherwise they are Federal agencies under jurisdiction of the Justice Department. Revenue in fees and otherwise now is deposited in the United States Treasury to the crdit of the Federal Government.

The proposal is not new, but this year there is reason to believe it may be effected, as the Justice Department reportedly is agreeable to the change. Justices of the courts involved have favored the transfer for some time.

Justice Harold M. Stephens, of the Court of Appeals, urged the budgetary shift before the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations last spring.

"I respectfully urge the committee to consider recommending that in the future—not this year, the matter is closed for this year—the budget of the United States Court of Appeals be handled through the Department of Justice as the budgets of other United States courts are, rather than through the District of Columbia.

"It has no proper place, from the financial standpoint, in the District of Columbia bill. The great majority of our work is Federal work, and the District ought not to be burdened with our support in any degree at all, any more than any of the other courts should be classed outside the Federal courts.

"The District would be glad to have the change; the Department of Justice would be glad to receive it, and I know that the Budget Bureau would welcome it."

Justice Stephens expressed the opinion the move could be made without legislation. Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, indorsed the proposal.

Postlude

Washington Summer Concerts Association presents its seventeenth concert at the Potomac Watergate, with Wheeler Beckett as guest conductor. Program: Overture to "Donna Diana" (Emil Nikolaus von Reznicek), "Laendliche Hochzeit" Symphony (Karl Goldmark), "Cinderella Fantasie" (Wheeler Beckett), "Water Music" (George Frederick Handel), "Espana" (Alexis Emanuel Chabrier).

Washingtonians who have long heard pleasant rumors about the accomplishments of the energetic director of the Richmond Symphony Orchestra had the opportunity last night to judge of his ability for themselves when he conducted at the Watergate. Their verdict was not only favorable, but also enthusiastically complimentary, and their enjoyment of the interesting program he presented was manifested in no uncertain terms of applause.

Wheeler Beckett displays on the podium an authoritative personality, a sure command of directorial technique, thorough musicianship and a sensitiveness in interpretation which communicates itself to the musicians. Although the program contained no great music to test his spiritual insight, his readings had the finesse which misses no detail of color or dynamics, and his temperamental zest was contagious.

His own "Cinderella Fantasie" proved to be a most engaging piece of imaginative writing. Composed several years ago especially for the young people's concerts in which he conducted the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, it is excellently scored with a sure sense of instrumental values, and its pictorial effects are adroitly worked out. The lilting waltz theme has melodic grace and charm, and no small amount of invention is evident in the ideational motives.

The other novelty on the program was Reznicek's animated overture to his most successful light opera, "Donna Diana." The composer is manifestly a master of orchestration, even though the material with which he works in this instance is ephemeral in nature. Viennese in its flavor, the music has zest, humor and the spice of sophistication.

In the romantic symphony by Karl Goldmark, which has its inevitable longuers as it is usually played, Mr. Beckett made several judicious cuts. The five movements were reduced to four, and the entire work was tightened up. This procedure turned what is virtually a suite into a closer fidelity to true symphonic form, and resulted in a firmer integration of the thematic material.

Handel's "Water Music," always enjoyable for its sturdy and forthright utterance, was particularly adapted to the Watergate setting. After a rousing performance of Chabrier's "Espana" rhapsody, Mr. Beckett was warmly recalled, and responded with an intermezzo from Wolf-Ferrari's "I Gioielli della Madonna." This did not satisfy the auditors, who asked for more, and received the furiana from Smetana's "The Bartered Bride."

Proud of the Doll She Dressed

Shirley Hamby, 4, who with many other little girls spent the summer at the Children's Health Camp of the Tuberculosis Association at Thirteenth and Allison streets northwest, made this dress for her doll. All the girls dressed dolls, which were provided them. This week, the last for the camp, the dolls have been placed on exhibition. The camp is financed by sale of Christmas Seals.

Driving Expert Asserts Women Are as Able Motorists as Men

Prof. Neyhart Arrives in Washington to Start Teaching Program Under Auspices of A. A. A.; Conducted Course at College.

Women under the same conditions and given the same opportunities as men will make just as good automobile drivers as men.

So said Prof. Amos E. Neyhart, the only college professor who instructs teachers how to teach automobile driving. Neyhart has taught 177 persons to drive and taught them so well that to date not one has so much as scratched a fender.

Arriving in Washington yesterday afternoon ready to begin transplanting throughout the Nation the successful driver-teaching program he has just completed at Pennsylvania State College, Neyhart sat in his office in the safety department of the American Automobile Association and explained his teaching methods.

Neyhart is on a year's leave of absence from Pennsylvania State College in order to establish driver-training schools for the American Automobile Association.

He has just completed the first college course of its kind to be offered anywhere—a six weeks' summer school course teaching teachers to teach drivers. One of Prof. Neyhart's students came from Portland, Oreg. The course was offered under joint auspices of the college and the A. A. A., which is now planning to establish driver-training schools throughout the United States.

"The most difficult part of the instruction," he said, "is teaching skillful shifting of the gears and smooth starting and stopping."

His method starts with acquainting the student with the fundamentals of the control devices and the proper position behind the steering wheel.

"The position that psychologists have found to be the least fatiguing is for the driver to sit in an erect relaxed position so that he can see over the steering wheel, and not through, with his left hand at the 10 o'clock position on the wheel and his right hand at the 4 o'clock position," Prof. Neyhart explained.

"And we do not go from one step to the next until we are sure that the learner has the correct way firmly fixed in his mind," he added, "for we have seen how hard it is far a student to try to unlearn any of his old habits."

The student has to go through a series of steps in which he is watched carefully by the professor, who firmly believes that once the correct way is fixed in the mind of the learner he can have no accidents at all.

Instruction is given in dual-controlled automobiles. The A. A. A. furnished six of these cars at the college.

The idea of teaching drivers occurred to him about five years ago when the annual traffic toll began to mount.

"We don't put a knife in the hands of an untrained surgeon," he said.

"That is when I began to ask myself why we turn automobiles over to persons who have had maybe one or two lessons from a member of the family or from a mechanic.

"Too many drivers actually don't know how to drive—in the best sense of the word. When they are taught how to drive skillfully our highways will be less hazardous for motorists and pedestrians."

The work of establishing the driver-training schools will get under way as soon as plans are completed, the associatoin announced.

Auto Hurts 'Help' Child to Overcome Previous Ailment

It may have been good luck when 3-year-old Nancy Lee Lowe was injured by the automobile of the Brazilian Ambassador, Oswaldo Aranha, August 13.

Since the accident, the child's right arm, which had been paralyzed and useless from a severe illness last March, has begun to improve.

Said Nancy's mother, "The shock may have done something to Nancy's system and given her strength to throw off the paralysis."

The ambassador, who has provided medical treatment for the girl, has sent his secretary to the Lowe home with toys and flowers and has sent a baby carriage to replace the one Nancy was riding in when she was struck.

D.C.Man Re-elected Colored Elks Head

Special Dispatch to The Post.

The election was protested on grounds of unparliamentary procedure by Edward W. Simons, rival candidate, who walked out with his delegation. Legal action is threatened.

Mother of 12 Asks Divorce.

Frederick, Md., Aug. 26.—Mrs. Katie E. Young, this city, through her attorney yesterday filed a suit for a divorce from her husband, J. Manuel Young, whom she married 30 years ago, August 14, 1906. Mrs. Young states she is the mother of 12 children and charges that her husband has upon a number of occasions threatened her life.

'Mystery Man' Tells Fair Rescuer He's Not From Embassy

Identity of the "mystery man" who Miss Frances Leyer, of 700 Fifteenth street southeast, pretty 18-year-old Eastern High student, rescued Sunday from Chesapeake Bay, was learned yesterday when the near victim telephoned his fair rescuer.

He is Louis A. Pawlowski, Veterans' Bureau employe. At present he is confined to his bed in his home, 5401 Galena place northwest, recovering from the effects of his near-drowning. Seized with cramps, he screamed for help, and several persons on shore ignored his shouts, he said.

Previously it was thought that he was from the Polish Embassy. With the aid of Bernard Palmer, of 1303 Kenyon street northwest, Miss Leyer pulled Pawloski, who weighs 200 pounds, to shore, where he was revived.

3 Plead Guilty In Counterfeit Ring; 4th Held

U. S. Sailor Trio Jailed in Default of Bail After Hearing.

Secret Service Is Aided by D. C. Police in Making Arrests.

Four men, three of them enlisted men in the United States Navy, were arrested yesterday by Secret Service agents on charges of passing counterfeit money in Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Following their arrest the four were arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

One, Salvatore Tamorria, who gave his address as 1303 L'Enfant square southeast, pleaded not guilty. His bail was set at $3,000.

The other three, United States sailors, pleaded guilty and were lodged in the District Jail when they failed to make bond of $1,000 each, which Commissioner Turnage set.

Detectives of the Washington Police Department assisted the Secret Service in investigating the case.

Police said that for the last year counterfeit money in small quantities had been passed in the District, Maryland and Virginia.

This money was believed to have been passed by the same gang, as most of the bills were spurious $10 notes, which had been "raised" from genuine $1 bills.

In most cases, detectives said, proprietors of liquor stores had been victimized by the counterfeiters.

James Murray Funeral Today

Funeral services for James Murray, 74, of 1613 Harvard street northwest, and former director of the old Seventh Street Savings Bank, will be held today at 9 a. m. at Sacred Heart Catholic Church. Burial will in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Mr. Murray, who died Monday at Lake Placid, N. Y., where he and Mrs. Murray were vacationing, was well known in Washington. He come to this country in 1893 from Ireland, making his home here. He later organized the old O'Hanlon & Murray Co. here. He was a member of the Holy Name Society and the Sacred Heart Church.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Annie Murray, of Washington.

Patrolman Griffin Dies of Pneumonia

Andrew S. Griffin, 40, a member of the Metropolitan Police Department for 12 years, died of pneumonia yesterday at Eagle Rock, Va., where he had been visiting.

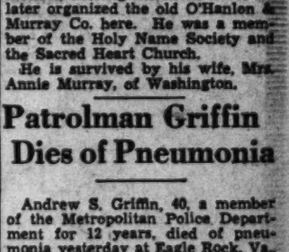
Griffin, who was on a leave of absence, lived at 3407 N street northwest. He was attached to the hack inspectors' office at the time of his death, but had formerly been at the First Precinct. He was best known to Washington residents as a member of the "Four Horsemen," a special traffic squad detailed to the midtown area several years ago.

Surviving him is his mother, Mrs. Nellie Hanks, of Danridge, Tenn., where his body will be taken for burial.

Rites for Davis Infant Will Be This Morning

Funeral services for the infant son of Mr. and Mrs James L. Davis, Ralph Leo Davis, aged 7 months, who was killed by the excessive heat of Tuesday, will be held today at 10:30 a. m. in the Chambers funeral chapel, 1400 Chapin street northwest.

He is survived by his parents, lifelong residents of Washington; two brothers, James W., 8, and Charles F. Davis, 6, and a sister, Mary Anna Davis, aged 4.



If you feel...
—tired
—run-down
—nervous
—out of sorts

THERE is usually a definite reason for such complaints...so, now let's reason sensibly.

Don't try to get well in a day...this is asking too much of Nature. Remember, she has certain natural processes that just cannot be hurried.

Therefore, if you are pale, tired, lack a keen appetite, have lost weight and feel rundown...a frequent sign that your blood-cells are weak, with a tendency towards anemia—then do try in the simple, easy way so many millions approve—by starting a course of S.S.S. Blood Tonic to feel like yourself again.

Nats Swamp Indians, 14 to 1, to Win Fourth Straight Game

Giants Defeat Reds, 6 to 5, For 14th

Hubbell Wins His 19th, and Ninth in Row Since July 13.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Aug. 26.—The New York Giants' winning streak reached 14 straight today as Carl Hubbell pitched the Cincinnati Reds to a 6-to-5 defeat, although he almost blew the game in the ninth before pulling out the victory.

The triumph was his nineteenth of the season and his ninth straight since his last defeat on July 13.

The victory tightened the Giants' grip on first place in the National League, giving them their second straight win over the Reds.

Staked to a 4-run lead in the first inning, Hubbell had only to coast to victory, but the Reds, after pecking away at him for a run each in the first, fifth and sixth, landed with a barrage of base hits in the ninth to send 2 runs across. The tying run was on second when "The Hub" forced one batter to fly out and the next to foul out to finish the game.

Ival Goodman and Les Scarsella were the particular thorns in Hubbell's side, the former getting three hits, and the rookie first baseman driving two runs in with a pair of safeties. The only extra base blow of the game was Babe Herman's two-bagger.

Paul Derringer started for the Reds, but was taken out for a pinch hitter in the sixth. Lee Stine and Benny Frey wound up the mound assignment, but Derringer was charged with the defeat.

The Giants did all their scoring in two innings. In the first, Joe Moore, Burgess Whitehead and Mel Ott singled in succession; Jim Ripple walked; Sam Leslie sent a fly to the outfield; Travis Jackson hit safely, and Gus Mancuso sent another long run-producing fly to the outer garden. This clouting brought the four runs in. In the eighth, after Jackson singled and Dick Bartell walked, Hubbell helped his own game along by singling in a run, to be followed by Joe Moore's base hit which brought in another.

Police End Show After Danno Regains Mat Title

Killarney, Aug. 26 (AP).—The police were called in tonight to disperse several thousand excited fans after Danno O'Mahoney, Irish heavyweight wrestler, had defeated Charlie Strack, of Chicago, in a match billed for the world championship.

The referee declared O'Mahoney the winner after 20 minutes of wrestling when both contestants fell out of the ring. Just to show they were familiar with American methods, the promoter and referee then indulged in a brief melee, adding to the crowd's enjoyment.

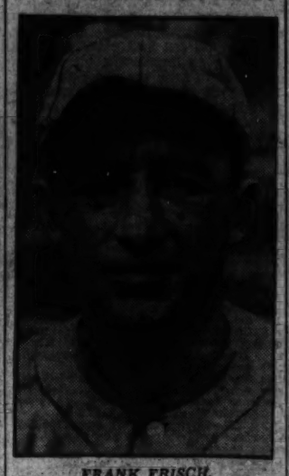
Breadon Signs Frisch to Pilot Cards in 1937



FRANK FRISCH.

St. Louis, Aug. 26 (AP).—Sam Breadon, president of the St. Louis Cardinals, announced tonight that he had signed Frank Frisch to remain as manager of the baseball team for the 1937 season.

Breadon announced the contract shortly after the Cardinals had suffered their fourth straight defeat at Sportsman's Park. Salary terms were not revealed.

"Frisch is a great manager," Breadon said, "and I thought this to be an opportune time to name him as the team's leader for next season. Not only that, but I wish, by this act, to prove my faith in his managerial ability."

Cards Buried Deeper by Bees, 10-4

Team on Brink of Third Place as Boston Has No Trouble at All.

St. Louis, Aug. 26.—The Boston Bees sank their stingers deep into the Cardinals again today, winning 10 to 4, and placing St. Louis in a precarious position in the National League pennant race.

Boston's victory—its third in three starts of the present series—placed St. Louis 2½ games pack of the League-leading Giants who again nosed out Cincinnati and only one game ahead of the Chicago Cubs, who won a double-header from the Phillies.

And with Dizzy Dean, the club's best hurler, ailing; the rest of the pitching staff shaky and several players injured, Manager Frankie Frisch was in a quandary tonight as just what to do.

Three home runs accounted for half the Boston score. Hall Lee clouted his in the sixth with two on. Wally Berger's—his twenty-second of the season—came in the fourth with the bases empty and Eugene Moore's in the ninth likewise was hit with no mate on the base paths.

Ferrell Halts Tigers, 7-0, In 'Debut'

By the United Press.

Boston, Aug. 26.—Wes Ferrell celebrated his reinstatement with the Boston Red Sox today by pitching a 7-0 victory over the Detroit Tigers—his sixteenth win of the season against 14 losses—as 5,000 fans cheered his return to the line-up.

It was the first time the tall, temperamental right-hander pitched since he was suspended and fined $1,000 by Manager Joe Cronin for taking an unauthorized "walk" from the box during last Friday's Red Sox-Yankee game at New York. The suspension was lifted yesterday but the fine stands.

In lifting the ban on Ferrell, club officials indicated that the ace twirler's future with the Red Sox rests on his ability to control his temper and attitude of Boston fans toward him.

On the basis of what happened today, Ferrell's future here seems secure. Fans passed favorable judgment on the star hurler by applauding him when he went to the mound and roaring approval each time he came to bat. When the game ended they stood and cheered him.

Bursts of temperament were conspicuous by their absence. Only once during the entire game when Umpire-in-Chief George Moriarity called what appeared to be a perfect strike a ball, Ferrell pounded the ball in his glove in resentment then tossed a third strike past Marv Owen, Tiger third baseman.

Ferrell's pitching left little to be desired. The Tigers could get only five singles off his "nuthin' ball" delivery and not an enemy runner reached third base. He walked four men, fanned two, received almost perfect support and collected a single in four times at bat.

Davis Is Suspended On Charge of 'Doping'

Davis' suspension came in connection with an investigation of the victory scored by Smythe's 4-year-old, Shoeless Joe, at Saratoga last Wednesday. An analysis of Shoeless Joe's saliva, taken after the race, revealed a stimulant (coramine) had been administered.

Jesse Owens' Coach Says Star Will Turn Pro Soon; Hits A.A.U.

By Larry Snyder.

(As told by the United Press.)

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 26.—Has Jesse Owens decided to turn pro yet?

It may be six or seven days before Jesse has sifted through the many offers which he has received. He's doing it cautiously. One thing he keeps in his mind. That is his degree from Ohio State. He'll get it.

The Amateur Athletic Union? There's not much I want to say about that business. I am firmly convinced that the A. A. U. should not be operating the Olympic games. They should be handled by a body of experts in track and field.

The A. A. U. is a paper organization. It definitely was discriminating against Jesse in that Sweden affair. It was a one-sided contract.

The A. A. U. bound the boy to appear in these meets but they themselves were not bound.

No, I'll not take over the job as Jesse's manager should he turn pro. I am staying right here (at Ohio State) and Jesse will go on his own.

I'll advise Jesse on his offers. I think it's my duty as a coach. Jesse should take one of the offers. A Negro boy doesn't have too much of a future and with big money up he'll be set for life.

Jesse acted like a thoroughbred over in Germany. He was magnificent. He sold himself to the crowd and the crowd responded to him. The main thing they liked was his sportsmanship and easy grace in running. That impressed them.

Hitler? That I think was a little far-fetched. There's little anti-Negro feeling. Hitler waved to Jesse just after he had won the 100 meters but he did not receive him. In fact, Hitler received only the Germans and one or two others.

Jesse and the other Negro boys on the team were not at all put out about it. They felt there was no anti-Negro feeling.

Chestnut Hill, Mass., Aug. 26.—The four highest seeded American teams met lower ranking opponents in quarter-finals of Men's National Doubles Tennis championship today, and in each case the favored team triumphed.

Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Tex., and John Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, defending champions seeded first, defeated Morbett Burgess and Norman Bickel, of University of Chicago, "Big Ten" champions, 4—6, 6—2, 6—3, 6—1. Don Budge and Gene Mako, of California, young Davis Cup pair, seeded second, eliminated David Jones, of New York, and John Law, of Pasadena, Calif., 6—2, 6—4, 6—3, 6—4. Frank Parker and Gregory Mangin, of New Jersey, seeded third, defeated John McDiarmid, Princeton instructor, and Hal Surface, of Kansas City, Mo., 9—7, 8—6, 6—0. Robert Riggs and Wayne Sabin, of California, routed the young Frenchmen, Pierre Pelizza and Yvon Petra, last foreign threat, 7—9, 7—5, 6—3, 7—5.

Helen Jacobs, of California, and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Boston, defending champions, defeated the sister team of Mrs. Marjorie Morrill Painter and Mary O. Morrill, of Dedham, Mass., 7—5, 6—3, as favorites also triumphed in quarter-finals of the Women's National Doubles championship. Mme. Sylvia Henrotin, of France, and Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of New York, top-seeded foreign tandem, defeated Gussie Raegner and Margaret Osbourne, of California, 6—4, 8—6. Kay Stammers, of England, and Alice Marble, of California, second-seeded foreign combine, eliminated the Bostonians, Kay Winthrop and Mrs. Virginia Rice Johnson, 6—2, 6—1.

Marion Miley, Patty Berg Advance

By the Associated Press.

South Bend, Ind., Aug. 26.—Rain almost scored a win over all the players today as Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., led the field of eight into the quarter finals of the Women's Western Closed golf championship in defense of the title she won last year at Cleveland.

Playing through a downpour, Miss Miley defeated Goldie Bateson, Wisconsin State champion from Wilwaukee, 3 and 2, and then sat in the shelter of the clubhouse to see the other contestants struggle in over soaked fairways and greens.

She was joined in the next round by Mrs. Opal S. Hill, of Kansas City, three times Western champion, who will meet her tomorrow in one of the feature matches of the tournament to date. Patty Berg and Beatrice Barrett, the Minneapolis youngsters; Dorothy Traung, of San Francisco, national finalist in 1934; Mrs. Gregg Lifur, the Southern California title holder; 18-year-old Hope Seignious, of Detroit, and Indiana's last hope, Harriett Randall, of Indianapolis.

Miss Miley played her usual methodical straight game up to the greens, but she had lost her putting touch overnight and for a time appeared in danger as she lost three of the last six holes played after making the turn four up.

"It wasn't the rain or the greens; it was just that I wan't putting today," she said as she turned in the highest medal card of the three rounds she has played.

Mrs. Hill also had a battle before she defeated Elizabeth Dunn, the perennial Indiana State champion, 2 and 1. She was two down at the turn in the Indianapolis star but she played the last eight holes in one under par to win five of them as Miss Dunn was in and out of traps. Mrs. Hill was approaching with deadly accuracy, leaving herself several one-putt greens.

Little freckle-faced Patty fell off somewhat from the sub-par pace she set yesterday in eliminating Mrs. Don Weiss, of Flint, Mich., but played good enough golf to defeat Mrs. Austin Pardue, of Chicago, 3 and 2, despite three three-putt greens on the last nine.

"Boy, I was scared," she said.

All Events Swept By U. S. Swimmers

By the United Press.

Cracow, Poland, Aug. 26.—American Olympic swimmers made a clean sweep of all events they entered in an exhibition swimming meet here today.

They finished 1-2-3 in the 100 meters freestyle with Peter Fick leading the way in 58.6 seconds. Art Lindegren second and Macinois third.

Johnny Higgins won the 200 meters breast stroke in 53.6 while Ralph Flanagan was first in the 400 meters freestyle in 4:38.6 with Jack Medica second. Flanagan and Medica also swam on the American 1,600-meter relay team which defeated a Polish quartet.

Taylor Drysdale easily won the 100-meter backstroke in 1:10.2.

9-Run Attack In 1st Frame Paves Way

Cascarella Limits Tribe to 5 Hits; Club Near Third Place.

14 Go to Bat in Opening Spree; 3 Cleveland Hurlers Clubbed.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

The heat wave abated in the Capital yesterday, but the hit wave didn't. Out at Griffith Stadium the slug-nutty Nats hauled off and bashed nine hits all over the premises in the first inning, scored nine runs in a single outburst, and beat the Cleveland Indians, 14 to 1.

Their fourth straight victory, which elevated 'em to within 1½ games of third place and left 'em 3½ games out of second place, was achieved very simply by the Nats. They simply went out and acquired a 9-to-0 lead before the game was an inning old, and made it stand up.

Fourteen Nats went to bat in that opening splurge. The third man out in the inning was Dennis Galehouse, the Cleveland pitcher, who wasn't having much success in getting anybody else out.

Galatzer Is Better.

When the Nats socked his successor, George Blaeholder, for another pair of runs in the second inning, Manager Steve O'Neill, of the Indians, unveiled as his third pitcher Outfielder Milton Galatzer who was committing his big league debut on the pitching mound.

Compared to Galehouse and Blaeholder, Galatzer was a striking success. Displaying a left-handed fast ball he held the Nats to seven hits and three runs in the last six innings.

Overshadowed by the Nats' first-inning scoring spree was the clever pitching of Joe Cascarella who never permitted the Indians to get back in the ball game. Cascarella held 'em to 5 hits and pitched hitless ball in the last four innings.

How It Happened.

Chapman beat out a slow roller to Knickerbocker. Lewis tripled to left, scoring Chapman.

Dave 'Long Count' Barry Succumbs at Age of 47

Chicago, Aug. 26 (AP).—Dave Barry, who gained fame as referee of the Dempsey-Tunney heavyweight championship fight in Soldier Field, 1927, for his long "14" count, died tonight after a six-week illness. He was 47 years old.

Narragansett Win Boosts High Fleet's Claim to Filly Laurels

Victory Puts Earnings at $20,450

Triumph Worth $3,000 to Widener; Fair Stein Is 2d.

By the Associated Press.

Narragansett Park, Pawtucket, R. I., Aug. 26.—George D. Widener's High Fleet, 3-year-old daughter of Jack High, strengthened her claim to being the leading filly of the season when she won the Mary Dyer Handicap here this afternoon, running the mile and seventy yards in 1:41 2-5.

This is only two-fifths of a second slower than the track record for the distance. The race was for fillies and mares exclusively.

Her victory by half a length over Herman Phillips' Fair Stein added $3,000 to her season's earnings which now total $20,450 for the season. The filly has never been out of the money in 16 starts last season and this.

In third place was H. C. McGehee's Fair Knightess, 2½ lengths back of Fair Stein and only half a length before Miss A. Doris' High Gloss.

Mrs. Silas B. Mason's Mid Victorian was first out of the gate, but High Fleet, Lady Higloss and Hal Price Headley's Sparta battled for the lead as they rushed to the clubhouse turn.

Around that first turn it was Lady Higloss on top, with High Fleet just off her shoulder. Mid Victorian ran third as they went into the back stretch, but when the far turn neared the field bunched up on Lady Higloss and High Fleet.

The winner was favorite and paid $5.80, $3.80 and $2.80. Fair Stein paid $5.90 and $3.90, and Fair Knightess, $3.20.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIGH EXPLOSION, $8.50, $5.30, $3.60; SUGABOOT, $5.70. $3.70; BUGLE ANN, $3.10.

HIGH EXPLOSION moved up fast on the inside in the run down the back stretch, gained a slight lead, fought it out courageously with SUGABOOT the entire length of the stretch and outlasted the latter at the end. SUGABOOT had speed from the start and went along with the leaders throughout. BUGLE ANN, away poorly, closed an immense gap and was probably best as the race was run. EMKATTEE was well placed the entire way though unable to improve his position in the closing drive. CHILKAT, slow to settle into stride, made up some ground. ELIZABETH FARLEY was in close quarters nearing the far turn and had to be taken up sharply and was unable to settle into her stride until midway of the turn.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good for all but RETIRED. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 2:51. Off at 2:54½. Winner, Miss Ethel D. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RED BADGE, $19.60, $7.90, $5.40; DIE HARD, $4.20, $3.20; RETIRED, $5.30.

RED BADGE went to the front in the run down the backstretch, drew away into a good lead, withstood determined opposition from DIE HARD and drew out through the stretch. DIE HARD, away fast, was prominently placed all the way and held on willingly to end. RETIRED, away poorly, had to close an immense gap to enter into contention. She closed willingly, though unable to reach the first two. GAY CREST was well placed all the way. MAINE CHANCE was unable to improve his position when placed under punishment. ZEVANAID unable to keep pace.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 3:25. Off at 3:27½. Winner, Mrs. W. R. Flemming's b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUN TEATIME, $12.20, $6.40, $4.40; STAROGAN, $8.40, $6.10; SIR KAI, $4.20.

SUN TEATIME followed in nearest attendance of the pacemaker for the first half mile, responded gamely when called upon, wore down STAROGAN in the last furlong and drew out steadily in the last furlong. STAROGAN went to the front in the opening strides, drew clear in the run down the backstretch and despite holding on well under pressure, was unable to cope with the closing bid of the winner. SIR KAI, away slowly and outrun for first half mile, closed with a belated burst of speed on the inside through the stretch. DIXIE PRINCESS moved up stoutly on the outside leaving the backstretch and dropped back after making an effort. LADY HOCKEBERGER, away fast, lacked speed to keep pace.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:56. Off at 4:01. Winner, C. H. Trotter's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CLAIMANT, $12.40, $6.00, $4.90; JIM CRAWFORD, $8.40, $5.00; SCOTCH SOLDIER, $5.60.

CLAIMANT, under slight restraint while being kept in nearest chase of the pacemaker, responded gamely to urging when reaching the stretch, wore down JIM CRAWFORD inside the last furlong and drew out at the end. JIM CRAWFORD took command in the run to the first turn, was steadied along in front and held on gamely, though unable to cope with the closing bid of the winner. SCOTCH SOLDIER, knocked back badly at the start when CHILLA MAY swerved in, had to be taken up sharply, worked his way up gradually and closed with good energy. BULL MARKET moved up on the inside nearing the far turn, made a game bid to reach the leader, but was not good enough and surrendered the show in the last strides. ALBERT D lacked speed to reach the leaders, though going at an even pace all the way.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $3,000 added. The Mary Dyer Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward, fillies and mares. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 4:33. Off at 4:35½. Winner, George D. Widener's ch. f. (3), by Jack High—Alamada. Trained by W. P. Mulholland. Net value to winner, $3,000; second, $600; third, $300; fourth, $150. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:46 4-5, 1:12 1-5, 1:37 2-5, 1:41 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIGH FLEET, $5.80, $3.80, $2.80; FAIR STEIN, $5.90, $3.90; FAIR KNIGHTESS, $3.20.

HIGH FLEET took the lead nearing the first turn, drew clear when the backstretch was reached, was under steadying reserve, met a determined bid from MID VICTORIAN nearing the far turn, drew out and held sway to the end, though bearing out through last sixteenth. FAIR STEIN, outpaced early, began moving up in the last three furlongs and closed stoutly in the stretch run. FAIR KNIGHTESS, slow to begin, moved up steadily in the run down the backstretch, made a game bid after rounding the far turn to keep up in the drive. LADY HIGLOSS made an attempt to go along with the winner, but weakened in the last quarter mile. SPARTA, restrained early, moved up, though never a threat.

SIXTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,100; claiming. The Endurance No. 4. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 5:06. Off at 5:11. Winner, Mrs. Wye's b. g. (3), by Strolling Player—Farthingale. Trained by J. G. Brown. Value to winner, $825; second, $165; third, $75; fourth, $35. Time, 0:24, 0:48 2-5, 1:14, 1:40 3-5, 1:59 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STROLLING HOME, $31.40, $19.20, $9.40; ANHELATION, $11.90, $7.30; STILL ALARM, $3.40.

STROLLING HOME, under steadying restraint until the last three furlongs, went to the front with a rush and drew out under urging. ANHELATION, badly outrun until the last half mile, improved his position gradually thereafter and finished with good courage on the outside through the stretch. STILL ALARM moved up on the inside and was unable to improve her position in the closing drive. FIRST BID, outrun for most of the way, closed some ground on the inside through the stretch. LIGHT HEELED forced the early pace, took command when OUR LILLY began tiring, only to falter when challenged. SECRET VOTE was never prominent. VIGILANCE was unable to threaten the leaders.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:40. Off at 5:42. Winner, Bristol Stables' ch. g. (4), by American Flag—Higloss. Trained by L. Toole. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $70; fourth, $30. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 4-5, 1:12 4-5, 1:38 2-5, 1:45 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLAG OF WAR, $3.60, $2.60, $2.40; LADOGAN, $3.10, $2.50; PLAYMORE, $2.90.

FLAG OF WAR went to the front in the first sixteenth, drew away into a good lead and rated along in front was roused several times when leaving the backstretch and was never threatened, winning with speed to spare. LADOGAN, in nearest chase of the leader for most of way, continued with good energy to the close. PLAYMORE trailed his field into the backstretch, closed with a belated rush through the stretch. PLAY BOOK, under steadying restraint until leaving the backstretch, made up some ground, though weakening in the closing strides.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 6:13. Off at 6:15½. Winner, T. R. McCaffrey's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HAZY AUTUMN, $21.80, $11.00, $7.60; HOOSIER'S PRIDE, $17.00, $9.00; WOULD DARE, $4.70.

HAZY AUTUMN moved up steadily after reaching the backstretch, wore down HOOSIER'S PRIDE for the command in the stretch, but had to be hard ridden to last. HOOSIER'S PRIDE went to the front in the run to the turn, disposed of BRIGHT BIRD, drew away into a good lead and came again after being displaced from the lead in the closing strides. WOULD DARE, outrun early, closed a big gap. POPO went evenly throughout, though unable to improve his position to any great extent at any stage of the trip. REAL JAM, well placed and reserved early, faltered in the last quarter mile.

Betty Lewis' Ball Throw Decisive

Georgetown Nosed Out by 4 Points; No Records Fall.

Team	Scores.
Sherwood	26	Hayes	5
Georgetown	22	Langdon	4
Rosedale	16½	Stoddert	3½
Virginia Ave.	14	Potomac Ave.	3½
Takoma	12½	Twin Oaks	3

Comely little Betty Lewis, 85 pounds of feminine charm, personality and basketball heaving ability, picked up a ball yesterday at Central High School Stadium, tossed it 64 feet 9 inches, and literally hurled Sherwood Playground to the championship in the annual track meet for girls conducted by the District Playground Department.

Miss Lewis' herculean feat, dramatically accomplished in the final event of the program, added five points to her team's score, boosting its total to 26, which was barely enough to nose out Georgetown's beleagured forces, which finished second with 24 points. Sherwood's victory avenged the defeat of its boys' team, which bowed to Georgetown Tuesday.

Not to be outdone by the boys, whose meet was one of the closest and most exciting held in recent years, the young ladies gave a thrill-packed performance that did not lag at any time. Each event, from the bean-bag target and novelty parasol race to the potato race for 60-pounders, added suspense and excitement to the affair. The meet was well attended by spectators and contestants alike. More than 2,000 girls competed.

No Records Broken.

Sherwood won the meet despite the fact that it captured only other event in addition to Miss Lewis' victory, that in the 115-pound baseball throw for accuracy, but it amassed innumerable points through the medium of seconds and thirds. For the first time in several years there were no records broken.

The eventual winners led from early in the games until near the end when Georgetown forged ahead by virtue of its victory in the 200-yard shuttle relay for 100-pounders, semifinal event of the program. All of the first five teams were closely bunched throughout the afternoon and the ultimate winner was in doubt until the final event.

Marion Mess Wins Race.

Anna Liegus, a heavy favorite, came through with a heave of 92 feet 10 inches to triumph in the unlimited class basketball throw. Miss Liegus easily outdistanced her field, leading Joyce Reynolds, of Kenilworth, runner-up, by a wide margin.

Another favorite triumphed in the unlimited 60-yard dash when Charlotte Decker, of Chevy Chase, breasted the tape ahead of Doris McCarty, Twin Oaks, and Frances Stanner, Burroughs, running the distance in 8 seconds flat.

Marion Mess, of Phillips, won the gold medal in the potato race, a screamingly close affair, in which Jean Silverman, of oPtomac, fin- Jean Silverman, of Potomac, fin- of Corcoran, was third.

Col. Edwin P. Parker, jr., attached to the Army War College, was guest of honor for the day, and delivered a brief talk to the contestants.

Pete Sarron Outpoints Carter, Local Battler

Sensational Rookie Interviewed

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Isadore Goldstein, yclept Goldie Ahearn, who can speak of the King Levinsky-Marty Gallagher fight as a highly disinterested party, inasmuch as he is in for only 50 per cent of the profits of the show, let it be known to this department last evening that it was his private opinion that it would be a whale of a fight.

POVICH.

When he said whale of a fight he might have been exactly correct. Nobody ever accused either Gallagher or Levinsky of being nymph-like either in or out of the ring, and thrashing about inside the ropes they resemble nothing quite so much as a pair of dry-docked mammals of the deep.

"Confidentially," whispered Matchmaker Ahearn, as he towed the Kingfish into this department's sanctum, "he is in marvelous shape, I'm telling you. I know the Kingfish personally, I'm tellink you, and he came down here specially to beat Gallagher, yes he did. Believe you me, it'll be a heluva fight."

Before he could be unquoted, Ahearn added: "And listen, don't get me wrong. Don't think Marty don't want to win this fight. I happen to know Marty wants this one real bad. Marty told me, personally, before he went to Boston to train for this whale of a battle that he wants this one real bad. Marty wouldn't lie, believe you me."

End quotes was quite unthinkable to Ahearn who began to exhale: "Look what that Kingfish did on the Coast. Fought nine fights and won eight of 'em. Look at the guys he beat; look at 'em: Lee Ramage, Peppy Del Rio, Hank Hankinson, Joe Bauer, Millionaire Murphy, Big Bob Brackey Whatsisname and Butch Rogers. Never heard of 'em, huh? What kind of sporting-writing place do you run here, I'm asking you?"

Whereupon somebody mentioned the Levinsky-Joe Louis fight and the Kingfish, who had been strolling up and down the premises, sat down with a start, perhaps from force of habits learned in the ring, or perhaps from the effects of the same invisible punch with which Louis knocked him out in one round.

"Do you think that bum, Louis, can fight?" the Kingfish asked. "Ho, ho. I'm fighting him again, see? And I'm knocking him out. the Kingfish wasn't the Kingfish that night. They told me to fight outa a crouch and that was a mistake. The Kingfish don't make the same mistake twice. That was the night I was in a transom, didn't know what I was doing."

Thus blandly dismissing that wretched affair, the Kingfish pounded his chest vigirously, put on his best scowl and exclaimed, "Lookit me now. Just lookit, I ask you. Two hundred pounds of man-eater. I'm the old Kingfish wid a new start. I'll beat Gallagher all over again."

Reminded that he didn't beat Gallagher the one and only time they ever met before, the Kingfish exploded: "I said I'd beat him all over again. I beat him that night but they give him the duke, why—I can't figger.

"But I'm knocking him out this time. I'm knocking him out in two," grated the Kingfish, holding up two fingers to emphasize the round he had chosen. "I'm knocking him out by t'rowin' right hands when they ring that bell. I'm the old Kingfish wid a new start. You know the Kingfish."

Pilot Denies Gallagher Is 'Protected'

Defeated Levinsky Clearly, He Says; Kingfish Here for Tuesday Bout.

Tom O'Donnell, new manager of local Heavyweight Marty Gallagher, yesterday entered vehement protest against claims made by Harold Steinman, manager of King Levinsky, that the Foggy Bottom fist flipper would be "protected" in his bout against the erstwhile Chicago herring peddler at Griffith Stadium next Tuesday night.

"That story is unfair to Gallagher," O'Donnell stated from Boston, where Marty is training for his return match against the Kingfish. "Marty has taken good and bad decisions with a smile. We ask no favors from the referee or judges selected by the boxing commission when the fight starts Tuesday night."

"Marty Gallagher has always been the first to admit defeat if handed to him," O'Donnell believes. "He defeated Levinsky by unanimous decision last October and three men cannot be wrong."

O'Donnell also denied that Gallagher had given Levinsky the runaround, refusing to fight him anywhere but in Washington, ostensibly because he knew he would be well protected in the officiating in the Capital.

Gallagher Not in Shape.

"Gallagher was in no condition to fight when Steinman had those bouts in five other cities offered him," Marty's new manager insists. "He was suffering from appendicitis, for which he underwent an operation last winter. All in all, Steinman's charges that Gallagher is protected are absurd and a direct insult to the intelligence of the boxing fans of the District. Gallagher will prove this Tuesday to Levinsky."

Steinman is expected to put in an appearance before the boxing commission today or tomorrow to register protest against what he terms "home town decisions" in favor of Gallagher. O'Donnell will arrive in Washington next Saturday and probably will protest just as loudly to the commission that Gallagher has not been especially favored in the officiating here.

While that tempest is raging in the teapot, Levinsky has broken camp at Mme. Bey's in New Jersey and will indulge in his first public workout here today. He will perform for the edification of the general public at the Humidor Gymnasium, 1121 Fourteenth street, at 2 p. m.

Hoping to push the gate receipts to a new record—or at least near-record—Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn has attempted to have at least one name fighter in each preliminary to the main bout.

Beds Barry in Prelim.

Donald (Reds) Barry, once the District's leading heavyweight, will appear in a six-rounder against Johnny Pacek, a stable-mate of Levinsky's. It will be Donald's first preliminary bout. He started as a main-eventer at 15 and before he had attained his majority was fighting main bouts in some of the country's leading boxing centers. Now, at 22, he is attempting a comeback.

Joe Lipps, who has fought many main events hereabouts, will oppose Pal Silvers, a rugged New York heavyweight, in another six-rounder. Two additional preliminaries featuring heavyweights will be announced later.

The tickets for this bout have been sealed at $1.15, $1.65 and $2.45, including all taxes. They are on sale at Joe Turner's, Annapolis Hotel, and Goldie Ahearn's, Ninth and E streets northwest.

Marcey Scores In Vandalia Shooting

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Vandalia, Ohio, Aug. 26.—Julius Marcey, who broke 187 targets, was the only Washington, D. C., entry to figure prominently in the class championship program here today, as six marksmen shot their way into championships over the rain-swept traps of Vandalia.

Joe Hiestand, Hillsboro (Ohio) farmer lad, added a new chapter to his storybook list of victories by continuing to dominate the thirty-seventh annual shoot with a score of 200 straight targets, which gave him top laurels.

Hiestand, regarded by experts as the best shot in the country, first won the international open Sunday. He repeated his victory of last year in the North American championship yesterday, and today became the first shooter in the tournament to break 200 straight in winning the class AA championship.

Wheat Higher, Corn Is Lower In Pit Trading

Domestic Offerings Offset Strength Abroad.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 26.—An early upturn of 1⅞ cents a bushel in wheat futures stimulated by strength of foreign markets could not be maintained today in the face of increased offerings on the bulge.

Some of the late easiness in wheat was in sympathy with a break of as much as 2 cents from early highs established in the corn market. Sales to realize profits were in evidence in both pits.

Corn closed ½@1 cent lower after scoring an advance of fractions to more than a cent at one stage. September finished at 1.12@1.12⅛; December, 96⅛@96¼, and May, 92@92⅛. Oats finished unchanged to ¼ off; December, 43¾@43⅞; rye was ¼ down to ⅝ up, and barley and provisions showed little change.

Union Carbide Raises Dividend

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 26.—Directors of Union Carbide & Carbon Corporation today declared a dividend of 70 cents a share on the capital stock payable October 1 to stock of record September 4. This compares with a 60 per cent dividend declared on July 1.

Wesson Oil Extra.

Directors of Wesson Oil & Snowdrift Co. declared an extra dividend of 87½ cents and the regular quarterly dividend of 12½ cents on the common stock, both payable October 1 to stock of record September 15. On July 1, April 1 and January 2 of this year extra dividends of 37½ cents each were paid.

International Match Dividend.

Payment of a dividend of 10 per cent to owners of allowed claims of International Match Corporation was authorized today by Oscar W. Ehrhorn, referee in bankruptcy. The disbursement will be made October 20 by the Irving Trust Co., trustee in bankruptcy.

American Power & Light.

Directors of American Power & Light Co. ordered today the first regular dividend payments on the company's preferred issues since late in 1932. A quarterly dividend of $1.25 a share was declared on the $5 preferred and $1.50 on the $6 preferred, both payable October 1 to stock of record September 8.

Quicksilver Imports Held Up by War

London, Aug. 26 (AP).—The civil war in Spain has held up supplies of quicksilver from that country, which normally provides about 60 per cent of Great Britain's annual requirements. Stocks in London are nearly exhausted and the official price is slightly higher at £12 3s 2d per flask of 75 pounds.

Dealings on the free market, however, have taken place at £14 per flask.

Sears, Roebuck Sales Highest For All Time

Net Profit Rises 70 Per Cent Above Same Period in 1935.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 26.—With sales running the largest in the company's history, Sears, Roebuck & Co. today reported net profits the first half of the current fiscal year were about 70 per cent higher than for the same period a year ago. Net profit the first six periods, January 30 through July 16, before Federal income taxes and contribution to employes' savings and profit-sharing pension fund, was $15,248,636, compared with $9,071,071 the corresponding six periods of 1935, the company's statement said.

After deducting estimated contribution to the pension fund and estimated Federal normal tax, profit was $12,634,285, compared with $7,472,517 the corresponding six periods of 1935. Sears' net profit for the fiscal year 1935 totaled $21,519,000, equal to $4.15 a share on the capital stock.

Sales for the first six periods this year totaled $217,531,666, an increase of 22 per cent, compared with the corresponding period last year. For the first six months of 1929 sales totaled $192,728,711.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Firmness in Steel Shares Fails to Stop Downward Drift of Other Stocks in Slow Trading.

New York, Aug. 26.—Government bonds remained firm, but a little ground was lost in the stock market on a sales turnover of less than a million shares. The market had its strong spots, but it looked tired and closed in a sleepy, sloppy fashion. Commodities were mixed. Corn had a setback, but wheat advanced. September wheat rose ⅞ of a cent a bushel to $1.11⅝.

Erosion of stock prices was slow, but wearing on the watchers of the price fluctuations, because of the lack of any rallying urge. Opening quotations were mixed and the market soon settled into a dull state with fractions chipped from prices here and there. Again the motor group was a disappointment, and at least small scale liquidation appeared to continue. Rails and utilities were slack to weak. The steel section was stronger than most groups, on its favorable balance of news. Some of the gains were quite evidently fresh investment and not short covering, as for example the further rise in Steel preferred. National and Bethlehem advanced, in contrast to the weakness in General Motors and Chrysler.

While domestic trade has been proceeding satisfactorily, foreign trade over the past year has shown little revival in volume, and the pendulum has swung against us. Excess of imports now are becoming the regular thing. Last year our imports exceeded our exports in only two months, but of the first seven months of this year the balance of trade has been adverse in five months. The total excess of imports for the seven months was $24,000,000, exclusive of the silver shipments, against an export excess of $26,000,000 a year ago. Counting that item, as it should be included, our adverse trade balance for the seven months footed up to $147,000,000, according to figures published today by the Department of Commerce.

Export Trade.

In July our export trade was about $5,000,000 higher than a year ago, but fell $7,000,000 under the June total, while imports rose $3,000,000 over the preceding month and $17,000,000 over last year, which gives some measure of the rising volume of food shipments, largely brought about by our New Deal policy of scarcity on the farms as a means of raising prices against the consumer. The fall in exports in July was brought on in large part by the slump in cotton, which commodity is rapidly losing its foreign markets, thanks to our scheme for fixing prices at a level which encourages production in other countries.

Merchandise imports in July were $193,400,000, compared with exports of $178,300,000. Our agricultural picture is now quite topsy-turvy. Cotton, once a great export item, is sinking. Wheat and meat, for years big producers of money for our farmers, have now become heavy items of import. Perhaps we can do without so much foreign trade, but something seems out of focus when with all our surplus agricultural land we are becoming consistent buyers of foreign grain and meat, butter and eggs, and when with our vast and unexcelled cotton growing regions we are losing our markets to the Brazilians, the Hindoos, the Egyptians, the Chinese and the Russians.

Trade Improvement.

Midweek trade news was mostly favorable. Output of electricity reached a new top and the steel industry, according to trade journal surveys, held its operating rate at the best of the year with no apparent slackening in demand. Here and there the view is expressed that inventories are being built up—possibly against labor troubles—but actual shipments are reported as heavy with a firm tendency in prices. Some anxiety may have been raised again over the demand at one mill for a wage increase, but while that might dampen enthusiasm for steel company stocks, it suggests return of better business in steel-consuming industries.

Preparations of the second largest unit in the steel industry to raise about $40,000,000 in new capital to go into plant improvement also is an encouragement for those who are growing anxious about business.

For one thing, the operation will mark the first of importance for a section of heavy industry to ask for new capital since the recovery began and after passage of the new securities act. Most of the new capital raised until now has been in small amounts and devoted largely to the liquor business. Now seems to be a good time to secure more capital, as it likely will be needed, for the old-fashioned method of securing it through retention of a portion of earnings each year has gone with the wind of the new surplus tax law.

In Trust.

Requests are constantly received by the financial sections of newspapers and magazines for information on the standing of the various investment trusts, which use as bait the fact that some bank or other, for a moderate fee and virtually no responsibility, acts as trustee of the fund. The bank, as the informed well know, performs merely a clerical function, and in no way controls the stock and bond operations of the investment trust management, nor is it responsible for losses or general slick dealing. It is extremely doubtful if many of the investors in most of the trusts have any such idea. They seem to think that the bank acting as a clerk for the investment trust is really a guarantee of sound management and of safety for the money invested. Encouragement of that idea, it is suspected, frequently is given by high-pressure salesmen. A typical letter of inquiry (and most prospective investors don't trouble to ask questions) reads: "Will you kindly advise me whether the XYZ's trust fund with the Blank Trust Co. is a wise way for a woman to save small amounts for old age?" At least it is a good sign that some people still think it is a good idea to save a little money.

Freight Loadings.

A slump in grain loadings from the drought section is responsible for a contra-seasonal dip in freight traffic last week. Southwestern and the industrial Eastern roads were generally a little ahead of the previous week, and substantially ahead of a year ago, but west of Chicago the trend was down from the previous week. The gain over a year ago is estimated at 17.1 per cent, compared with a gain of 19.9 per cent in the week to August 15, and 25.1 per cent in the week to August 8.

New Deal Economics.

When all else fails, the Department of Commerce usually can be depended upon to provide the day's prize in funny economic suggestions. Secretary Roper today, in explaining the excess of merchandise imports for July, allowed the public to take another peek into the wheels of the New Deal mentality. Actually our imports rose but slightly last month. The adverse trade balance came from a sharp drop in exports pretty largely, but regardless of the cause, the conclusions that Roper draws from the affair are well calculated to infuriate people who still are living in the horse and buggy days of thrift. Explaining that about half the rise in imports last month was in "luxury" items, the Secretary concluded: "That argues strongly for our economic recovery. It shows we are going in for luxuries." Perhaps that is why the dole allowance is mounting and unemployment figures still are in the millions.

Government Bonds Reach New High Mark

Street Expects No Call for New Funds Will Be Made Next Month.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 26.—The advance of United States Government bonds to unprecedented peaks today whipped up Wall Street interest in whether the Treasury will ask for new money September 15, its next financing date.

Majority opinion in banking circles is that in rising to new highs for the second successive day, the Treasury bond market indicated belief that no call for new funds will be included in the mid-September financing plans to be announced by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau on September 8.

If the market were expecting an issue of bonds for new money with a resultant larger supply of obligations, dealers explain, there might have been selling of Government issues instead of quickening demand. Observers who lean to this view believe that the Treasury will confine its September 15 operations to an exchange offering for the $514,000,000 of 1½ per cent notes maturing.

Some point out new relief needs in the drought areas will drain the Treasury of around $300,000,000 more than was originally estimated for expenditures up to next spring under the Resettlement Administration and the WPA. They feel, however, the Treasury with about $2,000,000,000 cash on hand will take this outlay in its stride.

In some financial circles, on the other hand, the idea is that should the Government bond market continue strong, the Treasury might avail itself of the opportunity to raise new funds at advantageous rates in addition to meeting its September note maturity.

Security Trading Increases in July

The dollar value of sales on all registered securities exchanges in July amounted to $2,057,844,758, an increase of 42.1 per cent over the value of sales in June and an increase of 44.7 per cent over the value of sales in July, 1935. Stock sales (including rights) had a value of $1,765,391,249, an increase of 51.6 per cent over June. Bond sales were valued at $292,442,992, an increase of 3.1 per cent.

Total sales of stock in July (including rights) were 64,728,459 shares, or 47.3 per cent above June's figure. Total principal amount of bonds sold was $350,594,325, an increase of 5.5 per cent. The two leading New York exchanges accounted for 95.4 per cent of the value of sales on all registered exchanges; 94.7 per cent of stock sales and 99.8 per cent of bond sales.

July stock sales on the Washington Stock Exchange were $106,606, compared with $172,920 in June. Bond sales were $76,701, against $86,554 in the previous month. Totals were $183,307 in July, compared with $259,474 in June.

Total Farm Income Up Despite Drought

Boston, Mass., Aug. 26.—In spite of drought conditions it has been estimated that the total farm income will be larger this year. This income, however, will not be evenly distributed, for the loss of the farmer in the drought area will be the gain of the farmer who raises crops. The prices of farm products in July passed a year ago by 12½ per cent and were the highest for any July since 1929.

Cotton Declines After Advance

New York, Aug. 26 (AP).—Sharp early advances on unfavorable weather and crop news were followed by declines in cotton today under hedging and renewed liquidation. December, after selling up to 11.69, broke to 11.51, with the market closing steady, net 3 points lower to 2 higher.

Steel Output At 93 Per Cent, Peak This Year

Production Is Behind Demand Despite High Rate.

New York, Aug. 26.—"Rising to a new peak for the year of 73 per cent, steel ingot production still fails to keep pace with the insistent demands for finished steel," Iron Age says in its weekly summary today. "In fact, the ingot rate does not give the true picture of the steel industry's present high activity, as rolling mills in many plants are turning out from 80 to 100 per cent of theoretical capacity and still are unable to reduce materially their backlogs of some products, particularly sheets, structural shapes and plates, which, on the contrary, show a tendency to increase as new business flows in.

"Efforts of the mills to get out customers' requirements have emphasized the unbalanced condition of steel plants, with ingot capacity greatly exceeding rolling mill requirements at some points, and the reverse situation existing elsewhere. Therefore, many rolling mills are being pushed to their limit, though activity of steel-making furnaces for the country as a whole does not fully reflect this situation.

"Now that chances of a summer slump in steel business have disappeared, steel companies are freely predicting higher operating rates within the next 30 to 60 days, which will necessitate the use of some high-cost equipment or units that have been in disrepair. Several steel company blast furnaces that have long been idle have been put in blast because of the shortage of scrap. Moreover, the high cost of scrap has brought a larger use of pig iron by foundries. A shortage of furnace coke, which is beginning to grow acute, will definitely hamper the blowing in of many additional blast furnaces except those that are self-sustained as to coke supply.

"Although orders for some products, notably tin plate, are lighter, the aggregate demand for all products is more than holding its own. At Chicago, for example, specifications for finished steel are 25 per cent greater in tonnage than in the previous week, while at Pittsburgh the ingot rate, at 72 per cent, has come closer to the average operation for the entire country than at any time since 1930, reflecting the increasing demand for heavy steels which constitute the bulk of finishing capacity in that district."

On the Air Today

Looking over the early listings of fall air openings, we note the prevalence of last winter's fare returning after summer vacations. At this particular moment it is natural to expect that the revivals should predominate.

Of particular interest to music lovers is the new series of General Motors concerts, to begin September 13. The following day will see the return of the serials "Backstage Wife," with Vivian Fridell, and of "Mary Marlin."

The new "Bar Z Ranch" show, with Louise Massey and the Westerners starred in their own right, will be heard first September 29. Frank Crumit headed East in a similar show last winter.

October openings include a program under the sponsorship of Radio Guide, a listener publication. It's to be a variety half-hour. "Grand Hotel" returns also, starring Anne Seymour. Ozzie Nelson and his orchestra, with Harriet Hilliard and Ripley, take up where they left off last spring, on the fourth. Fred Allen returns from his long vacation on the seventh, replacing Stoopnagle and Budd. Jack Benny begins his perennial winter series on the seventeenth. On that date Richard Crooks also begins another season with Margaret Speaks and the William Daly orchestra.

• • • •

Among those items not yet classed as finished business are the new show to replace Major Bowes on Sunday nights for his present sponsor and a half-hour dance series employing the services of a different "big name" band each week on Tuesday nights.

• • • •

In case you can't get seats for the big international press preview of "The Gorgeous Hussy" tonight, just spend half an hour with WJSV, beginning at 8:15. Maybelle Jennings has been assigned to tuck her microphone under one arm and saunter into the milling mob at the Palace foyer for intimate glimpses of and dialog with the brass hats who attend. These may include on the air no less than Clarence Brown, who directed the picture, and Producer Joseph Mankiewicz.

• • • •

Just a line to say that: Ginger Rogers will support Jack Benny when he inaugurates the new Fred Astaire series September 8 . . . The "Show Boat," after four years of mythical movement over the Nation's waterways, actually moves to Cleveland September 3. Another of those shows for the benefit of visitors to the Great Lakes Exposition's public auditorium . . . "Come On, Let's Sing" is to become a competitive challenge to the citizens of two cities in the near future. Starting September 2, the weekly program is to originate from different cities, with Cleveland and Philadelphia as the first choices. The Cleveland program will be staged in the auditorium with a capacity of 14,000 . . . Jack Benny has decided to make his permanent residence in Hollywood.

Features tonight:

Helen Jepson—Makes her first appearance as a permanent member of the "Show Boat" cast, WRC., at 8. Tonight's show begins the 1937 season for this veteran program.

H. V. Kaltenborn—Reports again on conditions in Spain, by short wave from Hendaye, France, WJSV, at 8:45. Eyewitness stuff.

Bob Burns—"Keeper of the Music Hall" in Bing Crosby's absence, presents Mary McCormic singing operatic arias; Ella Logan and Pat O'Brien in an interview, and the Radio Rogues in impersonations of celebrities, WRC, at 9.

Secretary Ickes—Subject unannounced, auspices of Democratic national committee, WJSV, at 9:45.

Robert Tests Managoff on Mat Tonight

Conqueror of O'Mahoney Meets Capital Favorite in Show at Park.

Yvon Robert, the 22-year-old French Canadian, who burped his way to within claiming distance of the heavyweight wrestling championship within a few short months, will snicker and snarl at Ivan (The Terrible) Managoff, local reigning sensation, in what may prove the piece de resistance of the outdoor season at Griffith Stadium tonight.

Robert has not been so much as extended here in previous appearances. He defeated both Mike Mazurki and Charley Strack last winter, before he had won his claim to the world championship by flopping one Danno O'Mahoney, the Irish ire-arouser.

Robert's triumph over O'Mahoney climaxed a spectacular campaign which began in a New England ring when he challenged the Irisher from the ringside. O'Mahoney ignored the challenge, whereupon Robert clambered through the ropes and flopped Danno.

Knocked Out O'Mahoney.

Yvon was ejected from the ring, but not from the building, and sat down to watch O'Mahoney subdue his duly elected opponent. Whereupon O'Mahoney advanced toward Robert and made dire threats. Robert clambered back into the ring and knocked poor Danno as cold as an Olympic official's heart.

Robert later soundly trounced O'Mahoney in a regularly scheduled match, whereupon Danno decided he had had enough of this country and its rude customs and departed instanter for his native shores.

Managoff's record here during the past open-air season compares favorably with that of any wrestler to show locally. He swept aside Emil, Ernie and Rudy Dusek, Joe Cox and Gino Garibaldi to establish himself as the lion of the hour.

Preliminaries limited to 30 minutes will find Rudy Dusek meeting Joe Cox, Ole Anderson tangling with Jimmy Cofield, Cliff Olson engaging Hank Barber and Doug Wykoff making faces at Henri Piers.

Washington Boys Club Wins, 6-5, in 14 Innings

In one of the best and longest games played on the sandlots this season the Washington Boys Club defeaten the Northeast Boys Club, 6-5, in a 14-inning game, thereby tying up their series for the championship of the Boys Club Insect League. Each team has won one game. The third and deciding game will be played tomorrow morning.

Bill Lewis, chucking for the victors, was the game's hero. He gave up 8 scattered hits, but was invincible in the last nine innings, striking out 13 batters in the last eight frames.

Center Market Downs Peoples Drug Store, 6-4

Peoples Drugs came off second best in its National Capital League championship series game with Center Market yesterday, losing a 6-4 decision in an exciting fray. The Druggists previously had defeated Pepco, another of the four contenders in the round-robin play-off.

The Druggists were off to a good start, coupling two solid base hits with as many errors for three runs in the first inning, but the Marketmen came right back with two in the first and another in the second that tied the score. Center Market added two more in the fifth and another in the sixth, while Peoples' best efforts produced but one run in the fifth.

Accounts and Deposits Winner in Series, 6-5

Accounts and Deposits yesterday chalked up its second straight victory over General Accounting Office in the Sports Center League championship series, winning by a score of 6-5 in a 7-inning game played on the Ellipse.

It was a nip-and-tuck affair, with the eventual winners coming from behind a 4-1 disadvantage to gain a 5-4 lead, and then staging another rally for the winning run in the seventh after G. A. O. had tied the score.

Black Legion Chief, Two Aids Surrender

Detroit, Aug. 26 (AP).—The State's round-up of 22 Black Legion members, accused of criminal syndicalism, neared completion today with the surrender of Arthur F. Lupp, sr., described by the prosecution as the State commander, and two fellow defendants.

Lupp and N. Ray Markland, former Mayor of suburban Highland Park, were arraigned in circuit court on charges of violating the criminal syndicalism law, conspiring to kill Martin H. Zink, Highland Park city commissioner, and conspiring to kill Arthur L. Kingsley, newspaper publisher in the same suburb.

Wilbur Robinson, said by the prosecution to be a "brigadier general" in the hooded order, also was arraigned on the criminal syndicalism charge. All three stood mute and pleas of not guilty were entered for them. Their examinations were set for August 31.

Gen. Dawes 71 Today.

Chicago, Aug. 26 (AP).—Brig. Gen. Charles Gates Dawes, former Vice President of the United States, who will be 71 years old tomorrow, said today he planned no deviation from his custom of refraining from birthday interviews. Though he is following the Presidential campaign with keen interest, he said he had no comment to make on it.

Lucky Baby Hurt.

Beaumont, Tex., Aug. 26 (AP).—Last week Patsy Ann Dubose, 8 months, fell 18 feet from the second-story window of her parents' apartment. She was uninjured. Yesterday Patsy Ann slipped on the linoleum and fractured her collarbone.

Huey Long Law Voided.

New Orleans, Aug. 26 (AP).—The late Huey P. Long's law requiring public utilities to pay the costs of rate investigations was declared unconstitutional today by a three-judge Federal court.

1. Find the apartment that meets your requirement—in the section in which you want to live.

2. Note the key letters and the number at the end of the ad. For example: D-5.

3. Then find the letter of the alphabet (in this case, D) at the top of the map. This means the apartment is located somewhere between the D at the top and the D at the bottom of the map.

4. Then look for the numeral (in this case, 5) at either side of the map. Where the D and 5 meet is the vicinity in which the apartment is located.

Baptists Are Warned Of Work at Own Door

Luray, Va., Aug. 26 (AP).—Dr. J. B. Hill, of Richmond, told New School Baptists from Virginia and West Virginia here today that "unless we Christianize the people at our own door, Europe is going to Nazilize and Fascize them."

The Richmond minister shared the platform at the opening session of the fifty-fourth session of the Shenandoah division of the church with Dr. J. T. Watts, of Baltimore, secretary of the church's State work in Maryland. The meeting will continue through tomorrow.

Trial 'Excesses' In Hauptmann Case Assailed

Publication of Committee Report Unauthorized, Says Bar Head.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Aug. 26.—Condemnation of sensational "excesses" that marked the Hauptmann murder trial, embodied in a report of a special committee on "publicity in criminal trials," stirred the American Bar Association tonight.

Judge Oscar Hallam, of St. Paul, chairman of the special committee, read the report today before the section on criminal law.

The report criticized Gov. Harold G. Hoffman, of New Jersey, for "indulging in public discussion of the merits of the case established in court;" members of the jury, for issuing "paid interviews;" Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon's magazine articles as "decidedly out of place," and the publicity attendant upon the trial.

Defends Report.

The St. Paul judge defended his course with the statement:

"The committee which made the report was appointed by its section and the report was made before the proper forum."

The section on criminal law accepted the report, however, and referred it to the association's executive committee.

Prior to its acceptance, Joseph C. Thompson, of New York, proposed an amendment condemning the trial justice and defense and prosecution attorneys in the Hauptmann case, but the committee voted it down.

The committee also condemned "trial by newspapers," terming "fundamentally wrong the system of the public press arguing the case outside the court."

The report termed Gov. Hoffman's activities particularly "repugnant" because he was also a member of New Jersey's Court of Pardons, which twice considered appeals of Bruno Richard Hauptmann for commutation of his death sentence for murdering the infant son of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Critical of Reilly.

The report said an article by Edward J. Reilly, former member of Hauptmann's counsel, was "grossly improper."

The committee approved Judge Thomas W. Trenchard's conduct of the trial and offered 16 recommendations designed to reform court room procedure.

One of the suggestions would forbid the use of cameras in the court room, another the use of radio, and a third would prohibit "vaudeville appearances" by jurors after trials.

The report was signed by Hallem, Albert J. Harnon, Urbana, Ill.; Charles P. Taft 2d, Cincinnati, Ohio, and John Kirkland Clark, New York.

Final Tribute Paid To Gov. F. B. Olson

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 26 (AP).—Gov. Floyd B. Olson went to his last resting place today, praised in death as a man who "reached power without baseness and wielded it without fear."

Thousands inside and outside the city auditorium heard Gov. Philip La Follette, of Wisconsin, pay this tribute to the first Farmer-Labor Governor of Minnesota in a funeral oration delivered before the flag-draped coffin.

National, and State leaders of various political faiths joined mourners from many walks of life at the funeral. President Roosevelt was represented by Maj. Gen. David L. Stone, commandant at Fort Snelling.

Four United States Senators were among the active pallbearers—Henrik Shipstead and Elmer Benson, Minnesota; Robert M. La Follette, jr., of Wisconsin, and Lynn J. Frazier, of North Dakota.

2 Injured in Crash.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Purcellville, Va., Aug. 26.—Ralph Brown, 50, of Purcellville, and Charles Able, 26, Harpers Ferry, W. Va., were injured seriously when their cars collided early last night on the road between Purcellville and Hillsboro. Able suffered severe head injuries and his condition is regarded as critical. Brown, who also suffered head injuries, is expected to recover. Both men were taken to the Loudoun County Hospital at Leesburg.

J. F. Love, astride his pony, is shown as his lance picked off a ring and won him first place in the fifty-second annual tilting tournament at Marshall Hall, Md. The onlookers are Mrs. Paul Knoll, of Reading, Pa., and Mrs. Lewis Rentzell, of East Riverdale, Md. At the festivities following the tourney, Love crowned his wife as queen. They live in Montgomery County. Love has competed in the tournament for 25 years. Second place went to Jack Hennessey, of Hagerstown, Md., and third place to Page Bowie, of Prince Georges County. Nearly 5,000 persons watched while 20 knights competed.

U. S. Aids Urge British to Curb Palestine Arabs

Great Britain was urged to take immediate steps to terminate the Arab anti-Jewish disorders and desist from any weakening in the face of the Arab terror in Palestine in telegrams received yesterday by Max Rhoade, Washington attorney and representative of the Zionist Organization of America, from Senators William H. King, of Utah; David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts; Morris Sheppard, of Texas; Arthur Capper, of Kansas; Representatives John J. O'Connor, House Majority Leader, and Isaac Bacharach, of New Jersey. Particular objection was made to any suspension of Jewish immigration into the Holy Land.

The telegram from Senator King came from San Juan, Puerto Rico, where he is detained by the illness of his son, and was issued in Senator King's capacity as president of the American Palestine Committee.

"As President of the American Palestine committee, I have followed with much anxiety and concern the serious disorders for the past few months in Palestine," declared Senator King in his cable. "I do not wish at this time to discuss the reasons for American justified interest in the satisfactory administration of the Palestine mandate. Suffice it to say that these reasons go back to President Wilson's support of Zionism at the Peace Conference, the subsequent Mandate Convention with Great Britain, and the joint Lodge-Fish resolution adopted by Congress in 1922, and approved by President Harding. Most of us, including myself, have refrained from any public expression with regard to Great Britain's policy since the commencement of the current disorders in Palestine several months ago. However, not only has the British government failed to curb the Arab terror, but the situation is now more alarming than ever, despite the presence of 15,000 troops in the country. This is very curious, and disturbing.

"I am convinced we can rely on the good faith of Great Britain to carry out her pledge to the Jews and to the League of Nations for the establishment of the Jewish National Home in Palestine. I therefore strongly urge, that if there has been any indecision or lack of firmness by the local officials in utilizing the resources at hand to stop the terror, such a mistake should be rectified by immediate and firm steps to protect those Jews already in Palestine and those who may hereafter seek refuge there."

"The report that a suspension of immigration is contemplated is unthinkable. That has been the prime objective of the Arab terrorists, and surely England will not disclose weakness by yielding. This would not only encourage the blood-stained Arab fanatics into a constant repetition of violence and prejudge the findings of the recently appointed royal commission of inquiry but severely shake the morale of persecuted Jews in Europe, especially in Germany. 'I sincerely hope Great Britain will speedily vindicate our confidence by immediate and effective action."

Drainage Included In Airport Program

The $100,000 program of improvement at Washington Airport will include auxiliary grading and drainage work which is expected to keep the field dry in the heaviest rains, the National Airport Corporation announced yesterday as it advertised for bids on paving work on the field.

Plans call for the paving of nearly 100,000 square yards of runways, taxi-strips and aprons. Bidding will be opened September 2. After the contract is awarded the contractor will be given 60 days to complete the work.

Two main runways will be built, one 4,200 feet long and the other 2,800. Each will be 100 feet wide. So as not to interfere with flying operations, work will be suspended between 4 and 7 p. m., when air traffic is heaviest.

War Imminent, Stalin Quoted As Telling Army

Other Speeches on Radio by Leaders Reported; Denied in Moscow.

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 26.—Soviet Dictator Josef Stalin, the Evening News said today, in a speech broadcast to every barracks and parade ground in Russia, declared "war is imminent."

(In Moscow tonight the Russian government officially denied Stalin or any other army leader had broadcast a speech today. It was said Stalin never speaks over the radio, and that reports to this effect were canards of suspicious origin.)

"At any moment you may be called upon to lay down your lives in protection of the proletarian birthland," Stalin was quoted by the newspaper as having told Russia's soldiers.

"We are on the very eve of momentous events. . . . Enemies are getting into position—so be ready."

Reporting Stalin's words as contained in one of the "three most warlike speeches Russia's fighting forces ever heard," the newspaper said they were broadcast along with militaristic speeches by Klementi E. Voroshiloff, commissar of war and marine; Marshal Michail Tukhashevsky, vice commissar of defense, and M. Alksnis-Astrov, head of the military air force.

All the speeches, the newspaper said, were destined for the ears of virtually all Russia's fighting men, numbering between 1,300,000 and 1,500,000.

Chinese Voice Regret to Japan In Fatal Rioting

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, Aug. 26.—Chinese reports of anti-Japanese riots in Cheng caused fear tonight of a new and potentially serious incident in the Orient.

Disorders broke out as an aftermath to the killing of two Japanese, and hasty efforts were made to placate Japanese officials here.

Chengtu public safety officials were dismissed, the Japanese consulate was advised. Chinese advices said Liu-Hsiang, chairman of the Szechwan provincial government, expressed regret to the Japanese consulate at Chunking.

The military, other Chinese reports said, took over control at Chengtu as a result of continued demonstrations against display of Japanese merchandise in stores. One merchant, accused of dealing in Japanese goods, was dragged to public safety headquarters by a mob which demanded he be shot as a "traitor."

(Six policemen were killed seeking to restrain the Chengtu mob, a foreign office spokesman said today on advices received in Nanking. He said five rioters were killed Monday before the rioters, storming a Japanese hotel, were overpowered by a large force of police.

(The spokesman said his information revealed the incident as larger than at first indicated. He said the mob destroyed the hotel and several business structures before it was dispersed.

(A communique from the Japanese army general headquarters at Hsinking, Manchukuo, said Russian and Japanese forces had skirmished on the eastern Manchukuo border.

(A Russian cavalry officer was reported killed in the encounter, which the Japanese advices said occurred on Manchukuoan soil.

Drives Past 'Blue' Light.

Philadelphia, Aug. 26 (U.P.).—David Lee, Chinese grocery proprietor, was hailed into court for driving through a red light. Lee, who has been driving 20 years, argued the light was blue. He paid a $7.62 fine.

Culbertson on Bridge

Every Hand Is Different.

What bridge table conversation is more hackneyed than the following?

NORTH—"Partner, why didn't you do so and so?"

SOUTH—"Why, on the very last hand I did that, and you said it was wrong! I certainly didn't want to make the same mistake twice in a row!"

South, by that remark, elects himself to the non-select club of imitators. Unfortunately, the club has millions of members.

There can be no greater fallacy than making a play because a similar one did wonders on a previous hand, or eschewing a play that fell flat on a "like situation." There are literally billions of possible 13 card combinations among the 52 cards.

South, dealer.

NORTH
♥ K Q 10 6
♣ Q J 9

WEST
♠ 10 3
♥ J 8 7 5
♦ K 6 5

EAST
♠ J 7 2
♥ A 9 4 3

SOUTH
♠ K Q 9 6 5

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	2 no trp.	Pass
3 diamonds	Pass	3 spades	Pass
4 spades	Pass	Pass	Pass

Take the case of setting up a trick in the dummy on which, as the defenders know, the declarer will be able to discard a losing card. At times such a thing would be fatal; at other times, as in today's hand, completely unimportant.

West opened the five of hearts, dummy played the queen, and East won with the ace. East noted that if he waited for the lead to come to him in clubs declarer would be unable to establish any one of dummy's, which was one of the "reasons" for not laying down the ace and king. The other was that, since South had bid two suits, East feared that he held a singleton club, in which case the attempted cashing of the ace and king merely would establish dummy's third club for a trick on which to discard. The complete superficiality of this so-called reasoning must be apparent. South, it is true, had bid two suits and thereby marked himself with at least nine, probably ten, cards in spades and diamonds. There was, therefore, a real chance that South might ruff a second round of clubs, but the burning question was: "What of it?" Of what earthly use would a club trick in the dummy be to the declarer? Surely, if he had a diamond loser, he would not avoid it by discarding merely one diamond.

East should have laid down the ace and king of clubs as fast as he could get them out of his hand, but instead of this he played a diamond and declarer gave the defenders no chance to recover from their error. He disdained the finesse in diamonds, putting up the ace, drew trumps, ending in the dummy, and discarded one of his losing clubs on the king of hearts. After that he graciously conceded the king of diamonds and a club to the defenders.

The moral is that a defender must select the lesser of two evils.

Richman Hop-Off Near.

New York, Aug. 26 (AP).—Pilot Dick Merrill and Harry Richman, singer, arrived back in New York tonight after a test flight to Boston in preparation for their projected transatlantic hop. Announcing they probably would take off Friday on the round trip flight to London, they said they planned a longer experimental flight to Newfoundland and back tomorrow.

Maryland Man Injured While Cleaning Gun

Wounded in the abdomen yesterday when a gun he was cleaning discharged accidentally, Henry Lockett, 32, of Colmar Manor, Md., was in Casualty Hospital last night.

Lockett was cleaning the gun at his home. Neighbors heard the shot and found him semi-conscious on the floor. Physicians said he had a "fair" chance to recover.
